time, at the South. The general objects of such Periodicals are pretty well understood. They serve to embody the opinions of enlightened minds on all great questions in which the interests of the arts, sciences, letters and politics are involved, at certain periods in the history of the country. Their aim is, not only to review books, and, in the sport of thorough and impartial criticism, to decide upon their ments, but also, in the performance of this duty, to discuss important subjects in such a manner as to make deep and 'permanent impressions upon the character of the people and destimes of the age; to diffuse kn whelge, not to faster prejudices; to create, direct and control, not to ech-, mons ; and final y, to canvass principles and maintain truth in a calm and dignified manner, and in a style chaste, luminous, nervous and appropriate. The offspring of a high state of civilization, they furnish evidence of intellectual advancement, and are the object of a just and horiorable pride, regarded as the exponents of the literary standing and character of unmunities.

The importance of sustaining such a work at the South, with ability and effect, is equally obvious. The South, like the North ang the other sections of the Union, owes a duty to the age and to the country in behalt of her literature. She requires an able and high-toned Periodical, that is fitted to nourish, and call into active exercise, the literary talent of our Southern Commonwealths. But, more than this,
