INNOVATIONS UPON THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE.

In the whole field of the rise and progress of the respective languages, there is no point to which the philologist can more profitably and curiously extend his inquiries, than to the successive changes which have been wrought in the Anglo-Saxon tongue.-CHAUCER, the oldest of English bards, invoked the Poetic muse in strains as uncouth as the character of the times in which he sung; and modern refinement either peruses with an offended eye his rude and unpolished effusions, or else wonders, in a natural esteem for antiquity, at the interesting barbarism of his dialect. But in fact, it is problematical whether or not the changes so entirely radical that have been effected, have been better for the beauty and simplification of the language; and though modern prejudices forbid a contrast, yet it is nevertheless true, that a correct study of the olden writers will unfold many charms now unknown, or at least unpractised. The innovations made prior to the commencement of the seventeenth century, may not be so properly considered as having tended to the deterioration of the tongue, though the linguist has cause to regret the decline, even anterior to that But it is indeed a decided loss to the fascinating spell of our language, that so many of the expressive words of Shakspeare, so much of the graceful diction of Swift, and Goldsmith, and Addison, should have grown into absolute disuse, and words of arbitrary coinage and unmeaning import have been subpear when we see that even three centuries back, in those unpolished days of letters, there were constant invectives proclaimed against the fluctuating system of their lexicography. For an example thereof we are indebted to the article on Archaisms, &c., in Worcester's Universal and Critical Dictionary of the English Language." And, by the way, the improved and enlarged edition of this book which has been recently published is, in our estimation, decidedly the best work of the kind now extant .-It is especially invaluable, because it contains all the obsolete words of the language and thus becomes an indispensable auxiliary to the perusal of the old to a Translation of Virgil's Æneid, published by fice, by which he could uphold and defend them. William Caxton, who first introduced printing into England, in 1490. Remember, that our Author is complaining of differences of language in various parts of the Kingdom, and the innovations made upon the English, and then note the entire change which has since been wrought in his own dialect, and we think that there is no one, but can be amused at the quaint and pithy character of the paragraph :

"And certaynly," he says, "our language now used varyeth ferre from that which was used and spoken when I was born. For we English men ben borne under the domynacyon of the mone, which is never stedfaste, but ever waverynge, wexyng one season, and waneth and discreaseth another season; and what comyne Englisshe that is spoken one shyre varyeth from another, insomuche, that in my dayes happened, that certayn merchauntes were in a shipp in Tamyse; for to have sailed over the see into Delande, and for lacke of wynde they tarved atte Forkland, and wente to lande for to refreshe them : and one of them named Sheffelde a mercer went into of the great political parties of our country, that on an hows, and axed for mete, and specyally he axed for egges, and the good wyf answerde, that she coude speke no Frenshe. And the merchaunt was angry, for he also coude speke no Frenshe, but wolde have hadde egges, and she understood him not. And then at laste another sayd, he wolde have eyren; then the good wyf, sayed, she understode him well. Loo what sholde a man in thyse days nou write, egges or eyren? Certaynly it is harde to playse every man, by cause of dyversyte and chaunge of langage; for in these days every man, that is in ony reputacyon in his countre, will utter his communicaevon and matters in such manners and termes, that fewe men shall understonde them; and som honest and grete clerkes have been wyth me, and desired me to wryte the moste curyous terms that I coude finde. And thus between playn, rude, and curious, I stand abashed. But in my judgmente, the comyn termes that be dali used ben lighter to be understoude than the olde auncyont Englysshe."

The terrible news of the burning of the Propeller, Phœnix, on the upper lakes, with the appalling loss of upwards of two hundred and forty human lives, is but too fearfully confirmed by later intelli-

FOR THE REGISTER. FIRST APPEARANCE OF "ALEMANCE."

OYFORD, N. C., Dec. 6, 1847.

Mr. EDITOR: It is well known to you and your readers, that public curiosity has long been on tipman possessing more virtue, against toe to see the New North Carolina Novel. which ge can be brought-one whose life has been lately noticed in the papers. There has been a vast deal of interest felt in the matter by the people of this County, but I did not know the extent and intensity of that interest, till lately. Last week, there was a Special Term of the Superior Court held in Oxford, and during the week, a report got abroad, that the supposed author had just received a copy of "Alemance." The report was true, and instantly, or before the father himself had time to examine, or even look at the features of his first born, it was torn from his grasp, and such a scuffle among the lawyers and others, I have not lately witnessed.

The successful man had to retreat forthwith to his room, and lock himself up, while, it would hardly be exaggeration to say, he was constantly beset by a mob. The poor Author offended every body by not giving him the preference, and is as sadly in the dumps by the complaints made, as if these very complaints did not test the anxiety to see his book, and the run it will have. For my part, I think no higher tribute could be paid to any production, than the excitement produced by a stray Copy of "Alemance," and as the author, to use his own language, is endeavoring to lift up the Old North, the State ought to reciprocate the kindness. A State is but honoring itself, when it honors those whose pens or tongues are ready and able to transmit its virtues to posterity. The youthful author of "Alemance," has, of his own head, and without the counsel or countenance of the great, suddenly astonished the whole country, by a North Carolina Novel, which has passed unscathed through the ordeal of the highest criticism, and who knows what he may not hereafter do? Let every body, at least read his book, and then judge of the writer's merits.

In conclusion, permit me an old associate, and in-timate friend of the author, to say, that he is one of the best writers of the State, and that "Alemance" is an earnest of what we may expect from his pen to be permitted to exist in the Uni- in the future, provided his book meet with that pat-GRANVILLE. ronage it deserves.

THE NEXT GOVERNOR. We find in the last "Wilmington Commercial," the subjoined Communication. In addition to the name of Mr. HINES, mentioned therein, we have seen Col. Andrew Joyner, of Halifax, and Dr. F. J HILL mentioned in connection with the Office.

FOR THE COMMERCIAL. MR. EDITOR :- The determination of Mr. RAYNER, not to permit his name to be used, in connection with the next canvass for Govenor, presents no obstacle to the selection of a strong candidate for that high and responsible Office. We have Whigs, almost without number, in our good old State who could worthily fill the Executive Chair. They have strength enough to elect their nominee, be he whom he may. But, of course, from various considerations, some persons are stronger than others.

I have a gentleman in my eye, at this moment, who will, I think, make as strong a run as any man in the State. I allude to the Hou. RICHARD HINES, of-I know not whether to say, Raleigh or Edgecombe-but I presume the latter, as his large farming interest lies in that County.

Mr. Hines has, it is true, been long withdrawn from active political life (a strong recommendation by the way.) but no man has a more intelligent understanding of Public Affairs than he, or keeps up more closely with the party issues of the day .-Though one of the very best Planters in the Eastern portion of North Carolina, his plantation being period, of much of the beauty and simplicity of style. almost a model Farm, his early professional and political career has thoroughly fitted him for conducting a canvass of this sort with ability and success. hither, is immense, and we may barely hope that His energy and industry are untiring, whilst his practical knowledge, and good common sense eminently qualify him for understanding the views of the People, and making himself understood by them. His manners are peculiarly frank, and Republican in their character, (more like our own Dubler's, stituted. How much more we, at the present day, than any one I know,) and will make him friends have reason to condemn these alterations, will ap- wherever he goes; whilst, should he be nominated and elected, his elegant and liberal arrangements would make the Executive mansion a true specimen of North Carolina hospitality.

No man in the State has managed his own affairs, with more consummate skill and success than Mr. HINES, and I have no doubt, he would guide the helm of State with equal ability. The Whigs certainly owe him some return for his uniform and zealous advocacy of their principles. For years, he has acted as Chairman of the CENTRAL COMMITTEE. and has contributed, both of his time and money, to sustain the principles of the Party, as freely as any man in North Carolina. And, yet he has never asked at the hand of the Whigs, the slightest favor. I know he is not ambitious, and he may never have thought of a nomination for the Office, but I have such knowledge of, and confidence in, his undying devotion to Whig principles, that I know he would The following article composes part of a Preface refuse no call made upon him, whatever the sacri-

The committee consisted of T. E. Pender, H. G. Spruill, Watrus Beckwith, Edmund W. Jones and Jonathan J. Lindsay, Esquires; after a short consultation the committee reported the following:

Whereas by custom and for the purpose of securing unanimity of action, it is expected by both the approach of any important election such man or men shall by some regular manner, be recommended to the People as a candidate or candidates, as may be thought most acceptable and best qualified to perform the duties to be undertaken; and whereas the time is not far distant when the suffrage of our State will be exercised to elect a Governor thereof;

1st. Resolved, That we, the Whigs of Washugton county, give our hearty assent to the proposed plan of a convention to be held in the city of Raleigh in January next, and that we recommend the appointment by, the chairman, of five delegates from each district of our county to represent us in said convention, to assist in the nomination of such candidate.

2d. Resolved, That while we defer to the distinguished abilities of many citizens of our State, who by their devotion to our principles and their zeal in advocating the same, have our hearty approbation and acknoledgements, we cannot but express a preference for the Hon. Kenneth Rayner, of Hertford county, and favorably and willingly recommend him to their consideration.

3d. Resolved, That our present Chief Magistrate, William A. Graham, Esq. is a citizen and officer of whom any commonwealth should be proud; his distinguished abilities and merited high reputation (as is the case with the candidate we recommend) are not confined to the limits of our State, but are appreciated by the

The New Orleans Bulletin states the Rifle Regiment, which landed in Mexico 700 strong is now reduced to only 250 men fit for duty .--Voltiguer Regiment, under Col. Andrews, landed 650, of whom only 280 can now be mustered. The South Carolina regiment, which numbered upwards of 900, is almost destroyed, and can muster but 150. Death, wounds, and disease account for the remainder. Other regiments have suffered severely.
