NO. 46.

WEEKLY REGISTER, RALEIGH, N. C., August 12, 1848.

LEGISLATURE LOSS AND GAIN.

The following Table shows the aggregate loss and gain in the Senate and House of Commons, viz:

Table with columns: Counties, Whig gain, Democratic loss, Whig loss, Democratic gain.

Which leaves a Whig majority of 4 in the Senate and 2 in the House of Commons—the Whig majority in the last Legislature having been 16, instead of 14, as erroneously stated by us in our last.

There will be a meeting of the Executive Committee of the "Rough and Ready Club," at the Town Hall, on Saturday evening at 5 o'clock.

We are much gratified to see by the last Wilmington papers, that a meeting of the Citizens of that place has been called to consult as the proper mode, time, and place of presenting a Sword to Col. PAINE.

THE RESULT.

The result of the Elections in this State, for Governor and Members of the Legislature, gives cause for bitter and serious reflection. That it is humiliating and mortifying is beyond all question.

Enough Whigs have failed to go to the Polls and deposit their votes, to have elected CHARLES MANLY Governor of North Carolina, by five thousand majority!

MR. McALLISTER.

The "Standard" is very anxious that we should procure and peruse the speech of this gentleman, as asserting that Mr. Fillmore formerly indulged in violent invective against Southern institutions.

We received from the office of the Millidgeville Union, a copy of the speech of this gentleman, which we have formerly alluded to.

We feel the highest confidence in Mr. Fillmore, and we challenge the production of his speech; for, according as New York does in newspapers, it is hardly possible that so distinguished a man should have addressed a large audience during such an excited canvass, without commanding the presence of the brethren of the press.

We were a County more thoroughly canvassed, than Craven—never were parties more divided, and never were the people more fully aroused.

GOVERNOR'S VOTE.

THE "STANDARD"—ITS NORTHERN ALLIES.

The "Standard" proclaims lustily that MILLARD FILLMORE is in favor of the Wilmot Proviso.

We would indulge in a homily on the occasion, which might be profitable, perhaps; but we forbear for the present, until we know the sure and final result.

NEWBURN, AUGUST 4.

EDITOR'S CORRESPONDENCE.

NEW YORK, August 2, 1848.

MR. EDITOR: Thinking that a random sketch, now and then, of some of the foes in and about New York, may be interesting to your readers, I have prepared a few desultory pencillings, which you can have, provided you think them worthy of an insertion in the REGISTER.

THIS beautiful spot is situated about half of a mile west of Brooklyn, and its local advantages and beauties are said to be immeasurably superior to those of the celebrated Mount Auburn.

Spoken of by my friend of the "Commercial Review," and with all the force of truth and eloquence which has distinguished him, as a writer, he says: "One hundred-and-twenty chickens and two shoats, crowded together between two covers, beat the "Four and twenty black-birds Baked in a pie," all hollow. We are rather incredulous, we confess. We are tempted to suspect that our jolly friends, allowed their pen to run off into a "roll" quiz upon their new acquaintance, the Public, just to learn whether or not it had a robust faith.

We have amused ourselves however in fancying that it might be a sure-enough Pie—and that the catastrophe happened to the diners thereof, which actually occurred to the King, Queen, and Maid of the old nursery song:

"When the pie was opened, The birds began to sing," &c.

That pie must have been opened with a broadsword, at least, if not with a whip-saw! Just suppose, then, that as the trenchant blade raked across the occupants of the two shoats, and the back-bones of 120 chickens, they had all simultaneously and spontaneously lifted up their multitudinous voices in song—that the sturdy and independent shoats should have grunted in indignation at being thus forced solitary and alone, "doubly alone," as the Poet has it, into such a miserable, chicken-hearted crowd! But we wander—

We merely intended to point our friends of the Review to the "Pie of Pies," as it is called, in that witty and well-written book, the "Bachelor of the Albany." This was a Breakfast-pie, gracing the table of that merchant Prince, Mr. Spread. Indistinctness is said by Burke to be one element of sublimity. This pie indistinctly towers until it is almost lost in the clouds.

In the centre stood, or, rather, towered, a vast pie, which was surrounded by minor attractions, such as tarts, fritters, collars, and marmalades, just as a great planet is attended by a body-guard of satellites. But as Jupiter excels his moons, so did that pie surpass collars, fritters, and tongues in magnificence and glory.

When that pie was in ruins it reminded those who beheld it of the Coliseum.

Extract of a letter, dated LINCOLN, August 5.

WE have the melancholy fact to communicate through you to our brethren in the State, that we are licked again. We will rest a spell, and then wage a perfect Buena Vista fight for, and under, old Zach.

Hon. H. W. Connor, the Senator elect from this County, let me let you know, by his speech of thanks, yesterday, he complained that Mr. Badger should confess that Congress had the power over slavery in the lately acquired territory, whilst he lauded, very feebly, it is true, (for the old man is like the Irishman's punch very weak), but as well as he could, the Wilmington teacher who usually bedecked his brow with the flowing plume of an involuntary bunty-tail-back-cock, for doing "that same" in his Nicholson letter. The Hon. old gentleman regretted his want of language to express, &c. &c.

Now, the back nearer the truth is, his want of ideas to express; for if the old gentleman had had all the language in the dictionary, "I have not a word to say," would have been amply sufficient for his use.

"Fellow-citizens: If any person had told me, on last Monday evening, that I should have stood here today, in the present position which I now occupy, I should not only have been incredulous, but I should not have credited him." Oh, those shades of Lindley Murray! let thy mantle fall on the man who can parse that sentence, according to the rule: a verb must agree &c. It is to be hoped that he will not be placed in the Senate committee on Public schools.

I neglected to state in its proper place, that Shuford is an independent "democrat," and has succeeded in knocking the final letter from Mr. Routh's name. He (Mr. R.) was on the regular ticket duly nominated and endorsed by the convention.

HON. DAVID OUTLAW.

The Washington Correspondent of the Baltimore Patriot, says the following deserved and handsome compliment to this gentleman.

Mr. Outlaw of North Carolina, a Whig, made his maiden speech, also, and a capital speech it was too. He is an able man as well as a modest and an unobtrusive member. That speech, in review of the conduct of the Administration and against the acquisition of territory, so well, and so gallantly delivered, will cause its author to be well listened to whenever he shall again rise to address the House.

In the course of his speech, he alluded to the "Buffalo hunt" to come off in Mexico, by which adventures from the United States, were to fetch another slice of Mexico from her weak grasp, and also to the flag that rumor had connected the name of General Shields with the expedition!

We call attention to Mr. CLINGMAN's letter, in another column of to-day's paper, with regard to Mr. Adams' views concerning the next Presidency.
