THE DEMOCRATIC PARTY AND THE PROVISO.

We commented last week upon the suppressed that the Wilmot Proviso was introduced into the cholera, not diarrhoa. He was so weak on ar-Oregon Bill, for the purpose of establishing the by his entire Cabinet. It would seem that the leaders of the Southern Democracy, who are not of the Calhoun stamp, are generally acquiescing he will proceed to the State Fair at Syracuse. in the constitutionality of the Proviso; and in this respect they are ahead of Gen. Cass himself, who holds on to the principles of the Nicholson letter. The Hon. Andrew Ewing, recently elected to Congress from the Nashville district, in Tennessee, makes the following graceful surrender of his constitutional scruples.

That if the question of the constitutionality of the Wilmot Proviso was res integru and now to be decided merely on the words of the constitution, I should be clearly of opinion that there was no grant of such power in that instrument; but as cotemporaneous and ong continued construction of a constitutional provision always exercises great weight in the final decision of the matter, and as the history of our government would show the recognition of this principle in all its various departments, and during every period of its existence; it was too late in the day for Southern statesmen to place much reliance in a contest to be waged mainly on the ground of its unconstitutionality, and more especially after the recent message of Mr. Polk on his approval of the Oregon Bill, and the argument of Mr. Bell, at Murfreesborough. stated further, that the strong ground on which we ought to place our opposition to the passage of the Wilmot Proviso, was its violation of the spirit of the Missouri Compromise, and its general injustice to the Southern States. It will be seen therefore, that so far from my admission of the constitutionality of he Wilmot Proviso, my argument assumed the conrary, and merely admitted that the unanimity of precedent and authority on one side had impaired the weight of this objection, and made it our interest to occupy firmer and more efficient ground on the

With these views it is very apparent that Mr. Ewing might be induced to vote for the Proviso, since he considers the question settled by precedent. That we are not straining the inference, is evident from the fact, that immediately following time we saw him till he disappeared." the above remarks, he adds: "This view of the matter is measurably the same with that occupied by Mr. Polk in his approval of the Oregon Bill.' Now if Mr. Polk, under the obligations of an oath, could give his official sanction to the Wilmot Proviso, we see no reason why Mr. Ewing, with ing population." views measurably the same" could not vote for

it. The Democracy boast of Mr. Ewing as a man of a high order of talents, and at present we believe that he has few equals in the ranks of his party in Tennessee. The "Standard" has repudiated Mr. Benton (has it?) for maintaining the same doctrine, and denounced Mr. Badger, as a traitor to the South, for admitting the power in Congress over slavery in the territories; it remains to be seen whether that infallible organ of the Democracy will hurl its anathemas at the head of Mr. Ewing. His next Bull of excommunication should also contain the names of Gen. Houston, Cave Johnson, John Y. Mason, and Robert J. Walker, all of whom are equal sinners against Southern rights. No doubt Gen. McKay is implicated likewise, as he refused to sign the South-Address. Recent developments show that a concerted opposition was made by the late administration to the Calhoun doctrines, because those doctrines tacitly censure the course of the President in signing the Oregon Bill. The Locofoco party was willing to use the slavery question in the Presidential and Congressional elections for the purpose of injuring the Whigs, but now that the elections are past, it is discovered that the whole Cabinet of Mr. Polk and nearly all the old Southern leaders of his party repudiate the principles upon which they endeavored to elect Gen. Cass. As to Mr. Walker, it is publicly stated, and not contradicted, that he entirely approves the course of Mr. Benton. We have recently seen it stated that Gen. Houston is not a free soiler, and is not in favor of the application of the Wilmot friends and companions will Proviso to California. It is said that he is for adhering to the Missouri Compromise. It may be that he so expresses himself, but one thing is certain he voted for the Proviso in the Oregon Bill, and his particular friend, Mr. Benton, avows that the Proviso was attached to that bill with a view

He has very properly determined to pursue his journey no farther, until about the 8th of September, when ALABAMA LEGISLATURE.-U. S. Senator.-From the Mobile papers of the 22d, we learn that the Democrats have a majority of ten in the House, and the Whigs a majority of one in the Senate. The Huntsville Chronicle says that four of the Democrats elected are Taylor men, and will vote for Taylor candidates for the United States Senate. Mr. McMullen, of Butler county, is pledged to give his vote to Taylor Sena tors. This, if true, will make a tie vote on that question in the Legislature.

A SHORT CONVERSATION .- The gentleman who perpetrated the following, expects to leave for California " on the first boat."

"Mr. Spriggins, I wish you would tell one of the boys to have the buggy in order for me to ride into the country this evening." "My dear, you can't have the horse this evening. Correspondence of the Washington Republic.

Hull, Mass., Aug. 29, 1849. The unfortunate Union blunders even when it thinks itself most secure. It charges upon Gen. Taylor the utterance of the expression "be them Democrats or be them Whigs," and imagines that it has caught him tripping in a very flagrant man-ner in his grammar. Whether he ever uttered the words, I cannot say; but the phrase, however oddly it may fall on the ears of usage, is strictly and logically grammatical. The form is far more jus-tifiable, grammatically, than "be they Democrats or be they Whigs." Both forms are eliptical; but the evident intention being to say, "let them be Whigs or let them be Democrats," and not "whether they be Whigs or whether they be Democrats," I am ready to maintain before all the schoolmasters in the country, that the expression attributed to It conveyed precisely what he meant to say, in the most concise possible form; and the dunces who before meddling again with matters which they do on saturday last, and the following opinions have not understand. We can pardon an occasional infraction of the laws of syntax by a veteran who has passed the better part of his life on the tented field in the service of his country; but what mean Equity, from Rutherford .- Decree for further sure of contempt shall we accord to the scribes and scribblers who, in attempting to pick flaws in the brave old man's grammar, and ridicule him there-Patton v. ised press, should have some regard to decency, honor, and truth." Here the sequitur is irresistible, and justifies this palpable construction: "Although we, the sole organ, have no regard to de-cency, honor, and truth, it is no reason why you should not." How the animus of the writer oozes out in the very pores of his style! In the same paragraph with this he broaches the sentiment that truth and honor are obligations more or less imperative, according to the station of the individual! So that he would introduce a sort of sliding-scale of morals-high for cabinet ministers, and several pegs lower for editors.

Will it be credited, that in the two numbers of the Union where the President is ridiculed for an expression falsely stamped as ungrammatical, and where he is pronounced "weak, ignorant, (!) and unskilled," the following gross violations of grammat, (for which a school-boy would be horsed.) occur in editorial paragraphs:

"And what must the country think of a cabinet who stands by and permits their predecessors, holding as high a position in the estimation of the American people as they do, to say the least, to be foully and shamefully traduced and maligned by a newspaper holding the relation of an official organ to them, for whose course they are responsible?"

The old schoolmaster here at Hull would give an urchin nine years old a rap over the knuckles, that would make them black and blue, for such a misuse of a collective noun as is here exhibited. To show that it is not accidental, here is the blunder in an aggravated form, on the same page :

"The organ has not answered one of these questions. We again repeat them; and if the organ cannot procure the information which they call for from the Secretary of the Navy, or the Secretary of the Treasury, or the Secretary of State, perhaps it can from the Solicitor of the Treasury, to whom it acknowledges itself indebted for so much information."

Here we have the organ, first singular, then plural, then singular again, all in five lines! Truly a most miragulous organ! And these are the Priscians who prate of the President's "scorn of the rules of grammar!" Another specimen of the nice grammatical sense of our Locofoco critics is where the Union (editor loquitur) says of the Whigs: "They gained the confidence of the people by false promises, which, after they had obtained, they shamelessly violated.' How I should have trembled for the boy who had taken up his composition, with a sentence like this in it, to old Master Cheever! "What!" the old man would have exclaimed, accompanying the ejeculation with an adroit twist of the writer's ear, "What,, sir, don't you know that the violation of a false promis is tantamount to the keeping of a true one! Go back to your seat, blockhead, and learn to think of the meaning of words before you put them on paper!"

Ah, my dear Union, it is dangerous for people who live in glass houses to throw stones! I could go on picking fifty such flaws in your crack indignation Teaders. It is not with your vicious grammar that I find fault; but with the impudent charlatanism which thus repeatedly mutilates the King's English in print, in the very breath in which it sneers at an old soldier for an ungrammatical speech. I sincerely trust that if the "senior" should find it irksome to July, Mrs. Penelope R. Bond, consort of Mr. take up the study of an excellent little work entitled James Bond, formerly of Bertie County N.
