If the ensuing Legislature should take any acion, as we hold it to be their duty to do, looking to our riddance from this worthless class of population, there are many questions that will present themselves for serious consideration-questions, however, that can be better met as they occur, than foreshadowed in anticipation. We may-

say, however, that some diversity of opinion ex ists as to the constitutional power of a removal of free negroes out of the limits of the State, without their consent. The 12th section of our Bill of Rights is put forward as an impediment in the such power does exist, a clause might well be inwhile, we are informed, in a most gallant in Virginia, providing that it shall be competent in the Legislature to pass laws for the compulsory deportation of the free persons of color. This is complished.

> Or, again : No man among us, at this day, would acknowledge any equality between the white man and free negro, in the enjoyment of political rights, whatever any apprehended constitutional difficulty in the way of a forcible deportation of the latter. Mr. BRYAN, then repre senting Carteret county in the Convention that amended our Constitution, took, in our estimation, the proper view of the relation that free negroes sustain to the State, when he said that they were cilizens of necessity, and must, as long as they abide among us, submit to the laws which necessity and the peculiarity of their situation compel us to adopt. It is from this view of their relations to the State, that we may set out to accomplish the desired end, in a manner that is liable to no constitutional objections. Such restrictions might be imposed by the Legislature upon their residence within the State, as would compel the low and worthless to leave it, by virtue of necessity. The policy of making actual and positive discriminations, under this mode, in favor of one of our Disunion exchanges narrates the following circumstances : "Gov. Quitman dates his proclamation convening the Legislature of Mississippi, the "thirty fourth year of the sovereignty of the State of Mississippi," instead of saying the year of American Independence."

THE REPORTED PROCLAMATION. The Republic notices the report that the Presi dent has sent a communication to the Marshal at Boston, in relation to the fugitive law, and had ordered troops to be concentrated at that city, and ness men throughout the city, as a matter of aswe regret to see, contradicts them both. It says, "the President has received no communication from any marshal, and has no information that leads him to believe that any peculiar disposition of the military force will be rendered necessary for the execution of the laws."

the President and Cabinet have had the matter per cent. to the Probate Court. In answer to his under advisement, and determined to meet prompt ly whatever exigency may occur. We also learn from good au horivy, that the Marshal at Boston will be removed to make room for some one who will see that the warrants are executed, or will communica e the information to the Government, whenever is assistance is necessary to enable him to carry the law into effec . While the President does not feel himself called upon to anticipate, actual resistance to the law. the Republic further says, that "if the exigency should arise making it the du v of the President to resort to the means vested in him by the Constatution and the laws to enforce their due execu tion, there is no doubt that his duty will be prompily and pruden ly discharged."

Weekly Raleigh Register,

He resided, for many years of the later part of his life, in Algiers, (a village on the opposite side of the Mississippi to New Orleans,) where he cultivated and maintained the strictest habits of industry and economy, His custom was to visit the city daily, and to avoid the expense of the ferry boat, (the usual mode of crossing) be kept a small skiff, in which he made his house servants row him over. The foundation of his fortune was will shake the cobwebs from the brains of o'd maids in that line. The Governor of a sovereign State, made by the transfer of Louisiana to the United now located, was acquired by him. The rise in value of this, would, of itself, have constituted at this day a large fortune.

The income of his possession, he studiously and with much good judgment, invested in improved property in the city, and so particular was he in the collection of rents, that he made out with the most perfect exactness, himself, every bill; lieved after the effort. He was never known to have a friend call upon him except on business, which he would compel him to despatch with al convenient speed, lest his time would be occupied with something which would not result in his pecuniary advantage.

The old gentleman, whom he employed to collect his rents, &c., was not even allowed to have his brother call on him, lest, as McDonough alle-It might be well enough, however, for his dough- ged, it would cost him an extra meal. His apty Governor, who is so uncaring in hurling the parel, when in the cut, was always neat and clean, but bore the unmistakeable evidence of being very ancient. So particular was he to save his clothes from the usual wear, that he has been known frequently to take off his linen on his return from the city and replace it with that which was of less value. The umbrella which he invariably carried with him, was said to have been found by him during his services in Gen. Jackson's campaign against the Indian tribes. When he put on a new coat it was noticed and made the subject of familar conversation among busitonishment.

A few year ago, a nephew visited him, and was told he need not repeat his visits, as it was expensive, and he subsequently died in the Charity Hospital, his uncle contributing nothing towards his funeral expenses. On one occasion he applied to the Legislature for the passage of an act appointing himself executor to his own estate, by which petition, the Legislature replied, that if he would make alfidavit that he was dead they would act favorably upon his pe ition.

Much is said about his liberating his slaves, and an erroneous impression has gone abroad in relation to it. When he purchased one, he at once opened an account with him charging his cost, xpense of clothing, &c ; and crediting him with the money received for his wages and when the slave had paid him his first cost, expenses and interest of money, with a fair consideration for risks, &c., he gave him his freedom, provided he Colonization Society would take charge of him.

FARCICAL TRAGEDY-EFFECTS OF THE LAW!

The colored hands on board the steamer Governor have been living for two or three weeks, in constant dread of the slave catchers-and although here is not the least probability that any one is about to annoy them in the behalf, yet the b'hoys have so delighted to excite their fears, that they seem to hear a slave catcher in every rustling leaf They armed themselves with deadly weapons, and resolved to shed their blood for liberty, if need should be. So much explanation is necessary in order to understand the sequel. On Wednesday evening last, while the boat was lying at the wharf in this city, waiting for the passengers by the Boston train, the colored genlemen naned having plenty of leisure, concluded o have a little exercise, to keep their blo d warm and perfect hemselves in the art of repulsing the bloody fellow that might be after them in the sneezing of a bed bug. So the farce commenced. One of them was appointed to enact the part of slave-catcher-the others were the slaves. So the slave-catcher dashed in among them and seized one of them, who at once snapped his pistol at him, and then turned and ran. Whereupon the catcher drew his pistol and let fly at the retreating fugitive when lo and behold, the pistol proved to be loaded, exploded and put a ball plump into Pompey's body, tumbling him over without ceremony !--Here was a muss indeed ! The curtain had fallen on the farce, and risen at once upon a bloody tragedy ! The wounded man rolled over, and as he kicked and cried murder, the cooler ones proceeded to explore for his wounds. Luckily, there was but a small charge of powder in the pistol, and Pompey's skin was rather tough. The ball had entered his premises but an inch or two, and 1y. We say our clothing is equal to any offered for when they pulled off his trowsers to render him | sale in North Carolina, and, we think superior, beaid, the murderous builet tolled on the floor !--Battered and bloody lay the victim of play; when happy thought, some one called for new rum to bathe the wound. With all alacrity, they rushed for the liquid soother of bullet wounds ; when, oh ye gods and hule fishes, another brought a bot-

le of camphene-burning, stinging, maddening camphene, and dashing it into Pompey's gasping wound ! Did you ever hear it thunder ! did you ever hear an earthquake, or a powder-mill blow up ? Diminutive indeed was the noise, to the outerv that came from the wounded man's lungs, as the camphene entered 'the murderous rent that Casca made.' He squealed, and whooped, and velled, and jumped until the fiery liquid was purged from the lacerated body of the abused man .-Proper aid was then administered, and the bell rang, the cars dashed in, passengers rushed abcard. The steam was let on, off pushed the noble Governor, and the gentle sea breeze cooled the burning blood of the actors in the fray-so that when the morning sun arose upon the steamer in Penobscot Bay, pistols slept quietly in their cases, and the descendants of Africa, with languid gait, were arousing themselves for the duties of the day. Still with the fear of the "catcher" or A. C. Kingsland, the Whig Candidate to: Mayor, their mind, but with not the least intention of evis elected by 5,000 majority.
