Stevenson 26, Hawks 22. On motion of Mr. Shepard, the Senate took up for consideration the resolutions heretofore introduced by him on the subject of slavery.

In discussing the subject matter of the resolu-tions introduced by him a day or two since, Mr. SHEPARD commenced by declaring his attachment to the Union. But viewing the progressive inroads on the interests of the South by the General Government, through the instrumentality of Congress, he argued to show, that the South had little to expect at the hands of the North, unless, being united in sentiment, as well as in interest, the South should present an undivided front in claiming and defending those rights, which the Constitution guarantied to us. He showed, by statistical tables, the increase of the black population, since the formation of the Confederacy, contended that, by the law of increase, a few more years would result in such an increase of slaves, as to require a more expanded area for their usefulness. That the effect of the Compromise acts, passed by Congress, would be to confine the slaves within so small a space, as to render them not only valuless, but a burden to their owners. He reviewed the opinions of Madison, Webster, Livingston, and others, on the rights of the States; compared them with the opinions of Mr. Badger, as expressed in his speech in August last, and declared that, if they cere right, Mr. Badger was wrong.

Mr. Shepard took strong ground against nulliication, as understood by the South Carolina politicians; but contended for the right of the State to secede, whenever an emergency should arise, rendering such a step necessary.

Hoping to procure a full report of Mr. S.'s remarks, we content ourselves, for the present, with this imperfect sketch.

The Resolutions were then referred to the Joint Select Committee on negro slavery. On motion, the Senate theu adjourned.

Mr. EDITOR: I beg leave through your paper to express my admiration for the prompt, honorable and patriotic course taken by Mr. Steele in the House of Commons, in moving the rejection of Mr. Sherard's Bill to repeal the Charter of the Central Rail Road in other words, to tarnish the honor of the State, and violate the Constitution of the United States. It was a source of high pleasure to every true North Caroli-nian present, and will be to those who may learn the facts, that there was a Representative prompt to move, and almost an overwhelming vote, as ready to complete, the massacre of a proposition to degrade the State by a violation of its plighted faith! I have no interest in the Central Road, but I feel a deep concern in the honor of the State, and I shall ever give my hand and heart to those who will stand by that honor, whether they be Whigs or Demecrats.
