Phas Festival of St. Nicholas Society-Merry Scenes and Knickerbocker Wit-The Pacific Rail Road-Southern Convention-Items of Information -- Another Broadway Horse.

NEW YORK, April 25. In a national point of view we have but few social festivals partaking of a public character. and linking the associations of the present with the memories of the past. This defect, however, is in some measure remedied in our large cities, by the reunions established by the different classes of population inhabiting them. each of which has its particular society, and a conventional day on which they assemble together, on which occasions there is always a lively display of wit and oratory round the fesrival. In the latter particulars, the St. Nicholas Society, more especially at its Paas Festival, has long been celebrated for its mirth, and wit, and fun. Representatives of nearly all the Knickerbocker families in the city belong to this association. I need only mention the Astors, Verplancks, Van Burens, Hoffmans, Ogdens, De Peysters, and many others of that ilk. They hold their annual session in the winter, and on Monday evening succeeding said, concerning the Russians and Turks. It Easter Sunday, they meet at what is called the | was admitted, that the acquisition of territory. Paas Supper, not so formal as a dinner, but a was the main spring of the war, and it was profree and easy affair. Paas is the same as Paque, (French.) the Passover of the Jews, and Passion week of the christians. Even the yellow on the Bishop, and then stop on the way back daffodils which, at this season of the year, spring and examine the disputed territories, to see if out of the ground here, are called Paas flowers, (pronounced paus.) Frederick De Peyster is President of the St. Nicholas Society. When doing the honors, he is usually arrayed in an- glide into the small hours, but still, tique costume ; dons a tri-colored chapeau ; has his merchaum on one side of him, and a valiant rooster on the other. Besides these, and the jolly Knickerbockers, like Tam O'Shanhe sports a time honored yellow sash with a ters, continued to enjoy themselves. We must

This quotation was from Shelley's Episichydion. A young married gentleman, (Mr. Fowler before mentioned,) came at once to the rescue. He was astonished to hear such sentiments uttered at the Paas Festival of St. Nicholas, where the cracking of eggs and the smok-ing of pipes indicated, the first, the pairing off of the human family, and the last, their social enjoyments. Old bachelors had a lonely, dreary, solitary time of it, unblest by the associations of the past, and anconsoled by the anticipations of the future. Sentiment was prolonged, not extinguished in matrimony, and in the quiet hours of connubial life, nothing was more reply to Shelley, he would quote the higher authority of Moore,

"The garhand I send thre was culled by that gate. Where our meetings the early seemed always too inte, Where lingering full of through a summer uight's moon Our partings, though late, appeared always too soon."

For the want of time and space, I must, perforce, omit the witty sparrings concerning the belligerent powers in Europe, and all that was posed to dispatch a committee from the St Nicholas Society, to visit Asia Minor, and call they were worth annexing to the Universal Yankee Nation. This might perhaps put a speedy termination to the war. We now began to

OUR WASHINGTON CORRESPONDENCE.

WASHINGTON, April 25, 1854. The House was densely crowded to day to hear Col. Benton upon the Nebraska subject. Mr. Phillips, of Alabama, brought it up again gesterday by a speech in its favor, and was followed by Mr. Harris, of Mississippi, who great y amused the House by his wit v assaults upon the bill. Before concluding, ill health obliged him to stop, and he was expected to continue his remarks to-day. It was known, too, that Mr. Benton would open his battery upon it, which brought crowds to the galleries. For some reason or other, Mr. Harris did no continue his remarks, and Mr. Benton rook the floor. He assailed the administration and the bill alike, and took care not to forget its author. charming and delightful than to look back upon | His speech was in print before it was delivered. the scenes and incidents of early courtship. The Committee then took up another bill, to which Mr. Wentworth moved an amendment, and vielded the floor to Col. B., who concluded s speech. It is understood that the President will veto he Insane Poor bill, and the veto was expected to-day. The Cabinet, it is rumored, is divided on this measure, a part being in favor of vetoing and a part opposed. Take which horn of the dilemma he may, there is death in the pot for him and his party; for it is a question upon which the party are divided, and in which each section feels a deep interest. Mr. EDITOR :- General Dockery, the Whig for the ill and feeble; good for coughs and colds, andidate for Governor, addressed a portion of and particularly beneficial and strengthening for Candidate for Governor, addressed a portion of the citizens of Greene, on Friday last, at Snow Hill. His appointment was not known by many. until his arrival. He mentioned and discussed the principal is-nes between the two parties, in a frank, open hearted manner, which must have carried conviction to the hearts of the most rigd opposers. He spoke of the resolutions of the late Whig Convention as embodying his own candid convictions; and therefore he could not fail to carry them ont, as much as in his power lay, without proving recreant to his own feelings. He said that the Whig Banner had been placed in his hands in its purity, and he would hand it down untarnished.

A passing notice, by the General, was then taken of Pierce's Cabinet, with its freesoil and abolition affinities, much to the discomfiture YOKE SEAM SHIRTS. Remember, gentlemen, of the Democracy.

It is true that Greene county was not represented in the Convention, owing to high waters preventing the Whigs from attending the meeting which they appointed to select delegates, but I am safe in saying, that General Dockery will receive a very large vote in the county .-He is the man for the people. The artificer of his own fortune, a plain, unassuming, candid man, he is the proper man for North Carolina's Governor.

The propositions before Congress, for the reduction, remission, or suspension, for a limited period of years, of the duty upon railroad iron, are eliciting much discussion from the important interests that will be affected by the adoption of either of these propositions.
