MR. BUCHANAN'S INAUGURAL AD-DRESS.

We laid this production before our readers in the last REGISTER. As a composition, it is well enough, and such as any pretty well educated man could easily furnish. The portion of the address which refers to the blessings and value of the Union is unexceptionable, and will receive the hearty endorsation of every true friend of his country. It will not, however, be much relished by some South, and this fact gives additional value to Mr. B.'s expressed sentiments, inasmuch as we are warranted to infer that the course of racy. We are not a little curious to see what the Southern Democratic press will say famous California letter, written so as not get back to the Atlantic States until after the election, made its appearance, there was a great flutter among the Democratic pigeons. How will it be now that the views expressed in the letter, have been incorporated in o old Buck's first State paper ? Perhaps the Standard will obligingly furnish all the information it has on the subject, and tell us candidly if it as a State Rights journal, approves of a construction by Congress, under the warmaking power, of a railway to the Pacific Ocean. We would be pleased, too, to know if the Standard can conceive of a more gigan tic power, and patronage-conferring work, than the construction of this Road to the Pacifi , by the Federal Government ? If the General Government makes this Road, the General Government will own it, and manage it, and who can tell the amount of men in all its departments, and who can estimate Burr or Bonaparte, be able to accomplish ? we'll do it for him---that's flat. Would not the liberties of the people be completely at the mercy of such a man, incratic noses at the idea of placing these ing as it is. States in the attitude of "pensioners on the bounty of the Federal Government," (!) although we shrewdly suspect that the States through which this Road would pass, would gladly stand in this attitude to the General Government-an attitude all the more agreeable because it costs comparatively little of their means. We have never joined in the wolf cry about the danger of "State Rights," but as we can very well see how they may be destroyed, and as we no more wish to see the General Government destroy the State Governments, than we desire to see the State Governments usurp the granted, or necessarily implied, powers of the Federal Government, we would never consent that Congress should build this Pacific Road. Congress has now sufficient power and means to attain all the ends of the Federal Government, and we would let the means of intercourse with the Pacific States remain precisely what they are to the end of time, before we would see Congress build a railway to connect these States with the Atlantic. We write not this as a party man. No party politics is involved in, or can be properly connected with the question. We write as an American citiz en, free to express his opinions upon all matters pertaining to the interests of his country.

Against Mr. Buchanan's views in regard to the Public Lands, we protest, because they are outrageously unjust to the old States. and particularly to the Southern portion of them. If "the squandering of the publie money sinks into comparative insig- equal to those of Philadelphia or New York. nificance, as a temptation to corruption, when compared with the squandering of the Public Lands," why, in the name of all that is just, fair. and States to the exclusive possession of triot says: what was given up for the use of the General now not only no use for these Lands, but the moval. P. S .-- Since the above was written, we have seen divers of our exchange papers on both sides of the political fence, and do not find even in our l'emocratic files, any exuberant manifestation of feeling about the inaugural It seems to be regarded as a humdrumical sort of a paper, whose chief, and only, merit is, that it has not startled anybody. Well, WEDNESDAY MORNING, MARCH 11, 1867 this we think is agreeable, and vastly to be preferred to your eight column inaugurals, bristling like columns of infantry, the tips of whose bayonets are lighted up with the lurid and we hope plausble.

Among our exchanges, we take from the fence being eloquent and ingenious. The Wilmington Herald, an extract which gives in jury rendered a verdict of Guilty, and the brief, what we, previously to seeing it, and prisoners have been sentenced to be hanged having time, and space, had set forth more at length. It is as follows :

"The address, we take it, will not give satisfaction to the Southern Democracy. of Mr. Buchavan's fire-eating friends in the are anxious to see what the presses of that party will have to say on the subject of the Pacific Railroad -- the construction of which at a cost of several bundred millions of dollars, Mr Buchanan favors under the "warhis administration will not be influenced by making power" of the Constitution. We had the pleasure of meeting on vesterday with the late Representative in much, and very justly, opposed to Mr. Branch in politics, we are personally glad to see him looking so well. Public service is certainly not wearing him out. By the way, when is the Democratic Nominating Convention for this District to come off? Will any body, or anybody's friends, contest the nomination with Mr. Branch! We feel interested in this matter. We have a Cousin down in Granville, who once represented this District in who will be employed in the construction of Congress, and was so treated by his party the Road, and its subsequent management that a'though we couldn't go his polities, our family pride was hurt. CORRESPONDENCE OF THE RUGISTER.

Oxford, N. C., March 7, 1857 DEAR SIR: The March Term of our Superior Court has been this week in session, his Honor, Judge Saunders, presiding. The incidents of the week were not especially interesting, with the exception of the trial of two slaves for the murder of their master, Lewis B. Norwood, last fall. The Solicitor for the State, Thomas Ruffin, Jr., Esq., prosecuted, and Hon. John Kerr and Hugh Wadlightning of "wild war." Buck is placid, dell, Esq., defended them. The speeches of these gentlemen were able, those for the dethe 8th of May ensuing. It is whispered about that the Democrats have held a meeting this week-Tuesday and have appointed certain delegates to a District Convention, to meet, perhaps, in April, with instructions to nominate for reelection the late representative, Mr. Branch, Your affectionate "consin." Mr. Venable. was coolly overlooked entirely. Nay, they did not treat him even with the cold respect of a passing glance To give piquancy and freshness to their deliberations, the meeting was so quietly held that your relative was not even apprized of the purpose of the anti-Americans to hold a county convention, and its deliberations were not suffered to reach his ears until the irrevocable fiat had gone forth, that Branch should enjoy the next two years, six thousand dollars, a fit reward for his illustrious services. What has he really performed, that his claims should be preferred above all others? Has not Mr. Venable been faithful and zealous? Has he not done the "State some service," and labored in season and out of season for his dear party? And, now, in his advanced age and experience, to be thus overlooked, and tacitly snubbed! It is Congress from this District. Although very too bad! Verily, how ungrateful is Democracy in these latter degenerate days!-Whether he has any political aspirations just ow, your correspondent is not informed, but t is surmised, that probably he may become a candidate upon his own book, and despite the sudden and positive action of his once ancient friends, the wire-pullers and thimble-riggers f Granville, the fear of the Standard, or the frowns of "cross road politicans and bobtailed lawvers," canvass the district thoroughly with a determination to achieve success. If so, who can tell with what result? He may beat Branch at the polls as easily as he will beat him upon the stump, and grasp himself the six thousand dollars. Perhaps the voters in this district will feel willing to allow their late Representative to retire and repose awhile after such a distinguished and useful Congressional career. They know his fidelity and labors have been great, and they and more consonant to the extensive range of his rare attainments and the vigor and compass of his intellectual ability. Mr. Venable is considerate and humane, and perstituency once imposed upon his unambitious and retiring nature, and which they seem devested with such powers? It will not for It was any thing but an agreeable surprise termined to afflict him with again, judging by the phosphorescent light thrown out upon the cimerian darkness around the lumnious oracles of Granville Democracy. We here take ceasion to return our thanks to the late honored in this way?

Mr. Buchanan, it is stated, has emphatically anounced that he will carry out the principle rotation in office throughout the whole Union, cating commissions as they expire.

The closing scenes of the Thirtyarth Congress have not yet been detailed, ingth; but the existence of the body came an end, according to the National Intelligencer, under discouraging, not to say blameable, circumstances. The appropriation bills were pushed through, after a fashion, by prolonging the session until noon on the 4th of March, but a great mass of business has been left unfinished, and some of it untouched. The Intelligencer says: "We supposed that when this Congress had voted to its members liberal fixed salaries it would have been regarded by them as a point of honor to give the same faithful attention to the transaction of the public business as was exhibited by the Fourteenth Congress, when the first salary compensation was in force; but never were hopes more sadly disappointed."

Senate — The bill to refund the duties paid upon goods destroyed by fire in New York, was Ken up. Its opponents among whom Messrs. Clay, Iverson and Slidell were the most conspicahis and pertinacious, endeavored to stave it off by renewed motions to amend, lay on the table, or ndefinitely postpone, calling for the yess and nays on each motion, and also threatening to discuss it until the hour for closing the session, Its friends said little, being anxious to reach a vote The bill was at length laid the table, it being found impossible to get it

Several private bills passed, and also bills proding for the construction of military roads in Washington and Nebraska Territories. Half-past Eleven-The galleries are densely owded with ladies waiting to see the prelimin aries to the inauguration ceremonies. Mr. Hale-Mr. President, is there any question before the Senate? Several members have suggested the propriety of a short Executive Sessian. [Great laughter ] Mr. Hale sat down without urging an answer to his inquiry. The Committee appointed to wait on the President of the United States, reported that he had nothing further to communicate. The President pro tem, then, after a brief vale dictory, declared the Senate adjourned.

EXTRA Session OF THE SENATE. The Senate re-assembled in Extra Session a 12 o'clock, when the oath was administered Mr. Mason by Mr. Pearce, and the former was chosen President pro tem.

Messrs. Bayard, Bright, Broderick, Cameron Chandler, Davis, Dixon, Doolittle, Hamtin, Kennedy, King, Mallory, Polk, Rusk, Sumner, Thompson, of New Jersey, and Wade, were qualified. The Vice President elect soon after came and the oath was administered to him, when h made a few appropriate remarks.

At one o'clock, ex-President Pierce and the President elect entered the Chamber, and proceeded with the Senate, the Supreme Court, Foreign Ministers, and others, to the east front of the Capital, were the inauguration ceremonies were ber, and adjourned till 1 c'clock to-morrow. House, -The House passed the joint resolution from the Sena'e, directing appropriate medals to be presented to Dr. Kane and his Artic companions, as a "testimony of the high estimation in which Congress held their merits and services. Mr. Aiken offered a resolution that the thanks of the House are due, and are hereby tendered to Nathaniel P. Banks, for the impartial and dignified manner in which he has discharged his duties during the present Congress. Messrs, Craige, Wheeler, and others, objected the reception of the resolution. The Speaker pro tem, (Mr. Haven.) decided that the resolution was a question of privilege. Mr. McMullin said he had voted against Mr. condemn. As one of the representatives from Virginia, he was not only opposed to the resolution, but entered his solemn protest against it .-It came from the last State in the Union that he should suppose it would come from. Mr. Seward regretted excedingly that there had been any manifestation on this subject. He came from the State of Georgia, which occupies as proud a pesition as Virginia, or any other State. He took pleasure, coming from the South as he did, and differidg from the occupant of the Chair, to vote for the resolution, and raise his voice in doing justice to a political adversary .-Great confusion

Mr. Harris, from Illinois, appealed from the decision of the Chair, that the resolution was a privileged question. Cries of "too late."

Mr. Harris did so on condition that members could record their votes. Mr. Barclay ineffectually endeavored to table the resolution.

During the taking of the yeas and navs. Mr. Walker said that while he was willing to do an act of courtesy, he did not thereby endorse the bjectionable principles of the Speaker. Mr. Barksdale was willing to endorse the resolution except that part saying that Mr. Banks had acted impartially. The resolution was then adopted-yeas, 119 The House, amid deafening confusion, passed
