The public has already been informed of the safe arrival at Ottawa, C. W., on the 3d inst. of Prof. La Mountain and Mr. Haddock, who ascended in the balloon Atlantic from Watertown, N. Y., on the 22d of September and for whose safety much fear was felt. Mr. Haddock has written a long but interesting account of their wanderings and sufferings in the wilderness. It appears the balleonists were up in the air some four to five hours, when finding themselves over a dense wilderness, and the darkness of the night around them, they concluded to descend. They did so and passed the night in the balloon fastened to the top of a tall sprupe tree, and exposed to a drenching rain. At daylight they again seconded, and here we leave Mr. Haddock to speak for himself:

"As the current was driving us still to the north, we dare not stay up, as we were drifting farther and still farther to the "frezen tide" from which we knew there could be no escape. Mr. La M. seized the valve cord and discharged gas, and we descended in safety by the side of a large spruce. We made the Atlantic fast by her anchor, and for a moment talked over what we should do .-We find not a mouthful to eat. No protection at night from the damp ground, were distant we knew not how far from habitation, were hungry to start with, no earthly hope of raising a fire and no distinct idea as to where we were, . We settled in our minds that we were in John Brown's tract or in the great Canada wilderness-to the south, we thought of the Ottaws, and knew that a course south by east would take us out if we had strength enough to travel the distance. La M. stepped up to the bailorn and gave the edge of the basket a parting shake, saying. "Good bye, old At-latic, and I farcied I could see a tear in his honest eye when he said it."

A minute account of their wanderings in a dense forest is then given. They traveled miles on foot along a creek, crossed and recrossed it on a log, slept on its banks, suffering intensely meanwhile from cold and wet weather. Subsequently they formed a raft, and on this slowly proceeded on by polling it, in the hope of reaching some habitable settlement. Here we quote:

It had now been four full days since we ate a meal. All we had ate in the meantime was a frog spiece, four clams and a few wild berries, whose acid properties and bitter taste had probably done us more harm than good. Our strength was beginning to fail very fast, and our systems were evidently about to undergo an extraordinary change. I did not permit myself to think of food -the thoughts of a well covered table would have been too much. I thought over all of poor Strain's sufferings on the Isthmus of Darien, where he, too, was paddling a raft down an unkown stream; but never believed we could stand half the amount of suffering he did. Besides, he had means to make a fire-we had none. He was upon a str am which he knew would lead to the sea and safety -we were upon waters whose flow we knew real ly nothing of, and were as much lost as though in the mountains of the moon. But we could not give it up so,' and took fresh courage as troubles appeared to thicken."

Soon after they heard the report of a gun, and the two lost men paddled their raft in the direction whence the report came, a distance of nearly a mile. Swing a shantee, Mr. Haddock rushed on shore. Here we quote again :

"I halloed-a noise was heard inside, and a noble looking Indian came to the door. ' Vous parley Francaise' was my eager inquiry as I grasped his outstretched hand. 'Yes, sir; and English, too.' He drew me into the cabin, and there was the head of the party, a noble-hearted Scotchman named Angos Cameron. I immediately told my story-that we came in with a balloon, were lost, and had been four days without food-asking where we were. Imagine my surprise when he said we were one hundred and fifty mile due north of Ottawa-in the dense, uninhabited forest, whose only limit was the Arctic circle. In a word, we we nearly 300 miles in a due north course from Watertown, in latitude 47.

"Dinner was all ready. The party consisted of four persons-Mr. Cameron and his assistant, who was also named Cameron, LaMab MacDougal, a hal:-breed, and his son Beauceil. I dispatched the young Indian after La Mountain, who came in after a moment the absolute picture of wretchedness. All that the cabin contained was freely tendered us, and we began to eat. Language is inadequate to express our sensations while doing so. The cloud had all lifted from our sembre future, and the 'silver lining' shone all the brighter for the deep darkness through which we had passed."

The narrative concludes with an account of their return to Watertown, N. Y. They were conducted sixty miles though the Canadian wilderness by Indians.

A BOSTON VESSEL FIRED INTO BY A BRITISH STEAMER.

[From the Boston Evening Journal, October 4.] Captain Goodridge of bark Hazard, at the port of Boston from the coast of Africa, makes the following statement:

"On the 8th of May, as we were running north, with studding sails on both sides, made a twomasted steamer steering for us and showing English colors. We run up the American flag to the peak, and it blew out well. When about a mile off, and being forward of our star-board beam, she fired a gun. We kept on, and in a about fifteen minutes she fired a shotted gun.-The shot went over our deck between the fore and main masts. Hove the bark to, and the steamer sent a bost alongside with two officers. who asked the vessel's name, master, &c. We declined permitting them to come on board, telling them they exceeded their orders. Asked them how they came to fire into us as our flag was up. They replied: Damn your flag, we want to see your papers.' When about to leave they asked if we wanted them to enter any complaint in their log. We replied no. Bidding us good day, they pulled off. The steamer proved to be the Pluto, belonging to the English squadron on that coast."

THE SPY SYSTEM .-- The New York Herald states that a system of espionage is exercised in this country, just as despotic as that which is rife in France, and perhaps more rotent. This system is carried on by means of mercantile agencies, whose ramifications extend thoughout the whole country and any one paying them the privilege may inspect from their books, the most secret ac-tions, including even the private matters of southern merchants. If a New York man is about to sell a bill of goods to one in Alabama, he goes to an agency and states that fact. Immediately the elerk who has charge of that particular section is called, and lays open the private life of the Ala-bamian to the eyes of the inquirer. Even his marital relations are discovered, and the kind of beverage with which he regales himself as well as the condition of his finances. By this means, these agencies have it with in their power to blast the prespects of a southern merchant, and ruin his character forever. The espionage practiced by the French Emperor cannot do more among his own people. In view of these facis, southern merchants should be extremely cautious as to whom they deal with in the North

[From the Philadelphia Bulletin.] NEW PHASE OF PROTESTANISM-BEAUTIFUL INCIDENT.

We happened, fortunately, to be present at Epiphany, Church, yesterday morning and was interested much beyond our expectations. Some time since, it appears, that a number of our prominent some of the daily journals, the bearing of which was on the first Monday in October.

The Rev. J. W. Cracraft offered the Epiphany Church, Fifteenth and Chestnut streets, for a meeting of ministers at nine o'clock. When we arrived at the church, at perhaps twenty minutes after nine, we found it crowded in almost every part, with an andience of ladies and gentlemen. This, of itself, at so early an hour, an a week day, was exciting. Looking around, we caw, everywhere, clergymen of all denominations, and we have been told that 150 were present. Mr. Cracraft presided, ministers of the churches crowding about him in and around the chancel. The Rev. Dr. Boardman, of the Presbyterian church, (O. S.,) opened the meeting with prayer; Mr. Cracraft read from the Scriptures. He then read a letter from Bishop McIlvain, of Ohio, cordially approving the object of the meeting. Dr. Nott, for half century President of Union College, Schenectadv. N. Y., of the Presbyterian Church, (O S.) then rose, with some assistance from Dr. Jenkins and Dr. Duffield, of Detroit-an exceedingly venerable figure, with snow white hair-and leaning on his staff, for he feels the weight of four score years, addressed to the assemblage a few words preathing the spirit of Christian Union. The chairman then called upon the venerable Dr. Humphrey, of the Congregational Church, late President of Amherst College, Mass,, who responded in a similar strain, marked with much modesty as well as Christian fervor.

The Rev. W. B. Stevens, D. D., of the Episcoal Church, who, as we understood from his remarks, drafted the original paper, then addressed the meeting, stating that he bad not imagined, shen he wrote it in his study, that such conseuences were to grow out of so simple and unobtrusive a movement. He was followed by the Rev. Albert Barnes, one of the signers of the paper, who carried forward the meeting in the same pirit. Prayer and singing were interspersed at intervals. Dr. Jenkins, of the Calvary Church, Presbyterian (N. S.) made a very earnest speech as to the necessity of the manifestation of the Unity which really exists among Christians, stating among other things that there is a cure for all xisting divisions.

The most interesting incident of the meeting courred at this point, an incident so far as we now unparalleled in the history of Protestantism. Dr. Nevin, of the Presbyterian Church, (O. S) ose and stated that the Apostles' Creed was one posed that Mr. Cracraft should repeat it as the creed of the meeting, all standing and joining in t. THE BRITISH NATIONAL DEBT.

A recent paper, published oy order of the House of Commons, gives some interesting particulars respecting the national debt of Great Britain. It covers the whole period of this institution-for such it seems to be-from 1693 to the present time. The two extremes present these figures: In 1694 the year after the deut originated, the tunded debt was £1,200,000, and in 1858-'9 the funded debt of Great Britain and Ireland amounted to £786,-801,154. The interest on the former was £413. 407, and on the latter £27,743,215. The unfunded debt at the former period was about five and a half millions sterling, and is at present somewhat over eighteen and a quarter millions. In round numbers, therefore, the present national debt of Great Britain is £805,000,000, or $4,025,-000,000, paying over $138,000,000 interest. Great as this debt is, it has been larger. At the close of the Napoleonic wars in 1815 it reached the almost incomprehensible sum of £860,000,000. The history of the British national debt is substantially the history of British wars. The Times, in speaking of the accumulation of the debt, truly says: "There is war, and it immediately stirs: there is peace, and it stops; there is war, and it goes on again." Thus, the first war with France, after the beginning of the debt, added twenty thousand pounds; and the war with Spain at the begginning of the last century, put on twenty thousand pounds more. The American war found the debt at £130,000,000 and left it at £240,000 .-000-so much money thrown away. All these additions were trifles compared with that which accrued from the war with France at the close of the last and the beginning of the present centuries. and which nearly quadrupled the last mentioned figures. But, say the British writers) if the country surmounted and reduced the enormous debt of 1815, when manufactures and commerce were in their infancy, the present aspect of the matter, of course, affords no ground of apprehension, but

THE "NO CHANCE" ARGUMENT. In yesterday briefly adverting to the pathetic appeals made by the Democracy to the Old-Line Whigs, we omitted to notice an argument which furnishes a very large contingent to the persuasive eloquence with which the former seek to conciliate the latter. As if despairing of success in the rather difficult task of vindicating the positive merits of their political principles, our Democratic clergymen of different denominations, signed a pa- friends, in their late addresses to "worthy and enper which was published in all the religious and lightened citizens heretofore known as Old-Line Whigs," have generally expended their proselyting that they were deeply concerned at the divisions | zeal in the effort to convince their ancient adversaries that all resistance to the Democracy is hopeamong Christians. They proposed that there less. The cuckoo cry of 'no chance" has been should be a concert of prayer for Catholic Unity outered in constant deprecation and ridicule of any movement designed to vindicate for conservative men a position independent of existing antagonisms upon the subject of slavery. The Democratic organs have therefore sedulously striven to paint in the strongest colors the dangers of the Republican Charybdis, not for the sake of inspiring a cautious navigation in our troubled political vaters, and with a view of pointing out via media et tuta, but apparently for the purpose of reconciling Whigs to the catastrophe of stranding upon the Democratic Scylla. We will not say that false lights are knowingly hung out by our Demoratic friends for the purpose of decoying the unwary, but we venture to suggest that the present is not a favorable time for orging their "no chance" argument, as whatever force it may be conceded have must now be admitted to b ar with especial weight against the pretensions of the Democracy itself.

The reader will of course understand that we speak with particular reference to the complexion to the next House of Representatives, in which it known that the Democracy have failed to secure a majority In the elections yet to take place in several of the States they are therefore deprived of this argument, or rather the substitute for an argument, and the Whigs, according to the representations of their opponents, now labor under no disability on this score which is not shared by the lately dominant party in the popular branch of Congress. The Whigs in all parts of the Union are therefore left perfectly free to consult their own political predilections in the choice of candidates to represent their principles in the next House of Representatives, without permitting themselves to be diverted from their personal preferences by any suggestions derived from the alleged "hopelessness" of an attempt to preserve their political integrity. Indeed, in the present attitude of parties, they occurry a position which calls upon them for special efforts to strengthen the hands of the conservative "Opposition" by adding to their numerical as well as personal strength in the next House of Representatives .-National Intelligencer.
