Of all the provisions of the Federal Constitution, that in respect of the election of President and Vice President has very justly given the most general satisfaction.

The first provision for election of President and Vice President was so defective, that it actually failed to meet the ends of the Government.

Now, it is obvious, that with an amendment which shall secure the election by a popular vote, the present mode of election is a defective one.

The amendment proposed is in the following words: "The electors shall be chosen by the people of each State in its Territory on the day of election."

By an illustration, suppose in the late election, the electors for Breckinridge had obtained 60,000 votes, and those for Bell had 50,000 votes.

Now let us enquire, by this amendment, what the result would be, if the electors for Breckinridge obtained 60,000 votes, and those for Bell had 50,000 votes.
