Which Find Vent in Harper's Drawer. (Harper for Harper.) Things said and done malapropos are sometimes very amusing. Here is an example...

Are Highly Well-Mannered Folk. (N. Y. Herald Washington Letter.) The President does not complain of any severe pressure upon him of office-seekers...

The Protest of the Fifteen Senators. The Senators, whose names are hereto subscribed, availing themselves of their constitutional privilege, do hereby enter their solemn protest against the passage of the bill entitled "A bill to be entitled an act to secure the completion of the Western North Carolina Railroad..."

And his French Artist Cook. (David Kerr in Harper's Magazine.) One autumn evening many years ago, in one of the more secluded rooms at Stratfield Saye the Duke of Wellington's country house, in which a picture frame, appeared a tall, thin, sallow, black-haired man...

"The Writ of Habeas Corpus." (Warren's "Experiences of a Barrister.") In the month of February, of the year following that which witnessed the successful establishment of the claim of Sir Harry Compton's infant son to his magnificent patrimony, Mr. Samuel Ferrer was traveling post with all the speed he could command towards Lancashire...

Through life every sorrow gives birth to a blessing. As shadows fall, showing sunlight is clear; The force of the shadow is but a caressing. For lilies and daisies the best of good cheer. Away, then, with doubting, with grief and repining. And learn to know Nature provides for each day. The deeper the shadow, the brighter the shining of purity's glory and beauty's array. The snow of the winter is earth's virgin blessing. Its bosom protecting, when winds wildly sing. Through branches denuded of emerald dressing. Awaiting the zephyrs of beautiful spring— The smile of the New Year, the winter dispelling. Gives blossoming beauty a welcome delight. To charm rosy vision, while artlessly telling. How life may recover from ashes of blight. The force of the tempest that sweeps o'er the mountain. And voices the billows that swell o'er the sea. Respects the same power that glasses the fountain. To show its resemblance created in these: Then, courage partaking from storms that assail thee. And trusting the wisdom that gave thee a soul. Thy way through disaster must needs of avail be. To harbor of safety where waves cease to roll.
