LAMBERT'S MURDERERS.

We copy from Noah's Advocate the following account of the trial of Lambert's Murderers. It contains some good moral reflections which well deserve to be read.

New-York, June 25.

The jury in the case of the boys implicated in the murder of Mr. Lambert have brought in a verdict of manslaughter. This was expected; at least there was no reason to believe from the nature of the testimony, that they could be convicted of murder; as it is, the punishment is heavy; it is confinement for a term of years in the state prison.

This case is calculated to produce a serious impression upon the minds of parents, guardians, masters and boys. Here are seven lads, apprentices to mechanical trades, carousing, drinking, and fighting at one o'clock in the morning; disturbing the public peace; assailing peaceable travellers, and finally causing the death of a worthy citizen. These things were not so in former times, and from the frequency of these broils, it becomes necessary to inquire into the causes, and produce a radical reform by other measures.

We go at once to the root of the evil, and it will be traced to the early neglect of parents, guardians and masters; they are to blame for the evil results of their neglect, because if they take a proper interest in the concerns of the youth intrusted to their care, and interpose their authority in time, their riots and the unhappy consequences would be unknown. A boy should not be permitted to be absent from his father's or master's house after 10 o'clock in the evening, without being compelled to give a fair account of himself; this and other faults should be looked into, explained and punished; they should be kept close at work during working hours, and in hours of recreation they should be able to give an account of themselves. A little trouble, a little exertion, a little interest felt for a boy while young, would be of great and important advantage to him as he grew up. Make him retire early; rise early; eat sparingly; drink nothing but water; watch his temper; correct him promptly and spiritedly; see that his education and morals are not neglected; make him work, for that is the antidote for vice, compel him to be civil, tractable and obedient, give no saucy answers; use no insulting language; assume no ridiculous airs of independence; encourage him in nothing that may make him hateful and disliked; in short, let parents and guardians do their duty, and we shall not have the melancholy example of seven lads at hard labor in the state prison; their morals, their characters and their prospects destroyed forever.

While guardians and parents are doing their duty to their charge, let the public authorities co-operate with them.

Look at the thousands of licensed grog-shops which disgrace our city; look at the bankruptcy, ruin, suicides, untimely deaths, miserable wives, and orphan children, produced by ruin!—On this trial, it appeared under oath, that these boys got into this disastrous scrape, because they had each drank 8 glasses at a tipping house in the neighborhood of the affray; three of brandy, three of gin, and two of beer; the compound alone being sufficient to infuriate, intoxicate and madden them.—What have we to think of the man, who, after midnight, could sell to boys 56 glasses of liquor? Is such a character worthy of a license? It is true, that in a populous city, there must be taverns and houses for public accommodation; but are we bound to give every man who will not work, a license to sell liquor? Are we to legalize vice? Drunkenness is the curse of our community; the facility of procuring liquor and the cheapness of the article are hurrying thousands to ruin. Something must be done to abridge this ruinous, this all-destructive vice. In the case of these lads, had the jury brought in a verdict of murder, they must have terminated their career on a scaffold; cut off at their tender years, and all their hopes, and the hopes of their families; as it is, their penance will be long and severe; and in what did it originate? In being from home at an unseasonable hour; in drinking glass after glass of liquor, indulging in a quarrelsome disposition, which led them into dispute; then into fights, and finally into the commission of murder.

Let this case be a warning to parents, guardians, masters and boys.—Let those in authority exercise their authority; let each offence be noticed and corrected promptly; let admonition and example go hand in hand; see that your boys and apprentices are home before you retire to bed, see that no liquor or ardent spirits are introduced into your shop; arraign, punish, and if necessary dismiss any apprentice found drunk, and let no other master take a boy thus dismissed. Let master-mechanics have an understanding on this subject; let the Mechanics' Society and Mechanics' Institution take measures on the subject; let something be done to mend the manners and morals of apprentices, by united coercive measures, and good results will be produced.

Let boys understand and be made to know, that fighting in the streets is the province of blackguards, and blackguards must be driven from society; let them have a pride above such grovelling practices: and, above all, let them unite, and shun, as companions, any who may be found in liquor, and in time a reform so much desired may be produced.

From the National Intelligencer.

This is the era of public gratitude and posthumous honors to departed merit. Of gratitude to the living, we have in successive acts of our government, and other public demonstrations, the most abundant evidences. Of posthumous honors, Baltimore set a noble example to her sister cities some years ago (and it has not been without effect) in the erection of the monuments to the memory of Washington, and to the memory of her own sons who fell in battle; & North-Carolina led the way for the States to follow in the same path. In every state and in every city, we see a spirit of emulation, which will be perpetuated by monuments, worthy of the country, dedicated to the memory of such as have devoted themselves to her service. The Masonic Fraternity, never behind in good works, we perceive, have undertaken an object worthy of their general co-operation—the erection of a tomb over the grave of Washington at Mount Vernon. We have for some time despaired of a redemption of the solemn pledge of this government to pay the honors due to the remains of the illustrious patriot; and, abandoning the hope of seeing his remains deposited in the centre of the Capitol, which would have been in every respect a fit depository for them, we are glad to find that those who were, on earth, in a peculiar sense, his brethren, have resolved, from their limited resources, to prepare a visible monument of the affection and esteem in which they hold his memory and his manly principles. In Georgia, we are glad to perceive, that the Legislature, at its last session, appropriated $4,000 dollars towards the expense of erecting the monuments, undertaken by the generous citizens of Savannah to the memory of Greene and Pulaski, of which the corner stones were laid during the late visit of Lafayette. At Philadelphia, a noble monument to the memory of Washington is in contemplation. And what a glorious scene was witnessed on the 17th of last month, near the cradle of American Liberty, where a hundred and fifty thousand souls poured forth blessings on the memory of their brave ancestors who fought at Bunker's Hill, and greeted with blessings no less warm the surviving patriots of their fathers, with the good old General at their head. Such scenes have not only an imposing effect on the present generation, but a still more impressive and durable one on that which is springing up. They tend to elevate the moral sentiment and strengthen the impulses of patriotism, without a tendency to any thing which the most desponding can find reason to deprecate.

SOMNOLENCY.

Dean Swift preached a sermon on the text from Acts "And there sat in a window a certain young man named Eutychus, being fallen into a deep sleep: and as Paul was long preaching, he sunk down with sleep, and fell down from the third loft and was taken up dead." He was however, miraculously restored to life by Paul. The Dean commences thus:

I have chosen these words with design, if possible, to disturb some part in this audience of half an hour's sleep, for the convenience & exercise whereof, this place at this season of the day, is very much celebrated.

There is indeed, one mortal disadvantage to which all preaching is subject: that those, who by the wickedness of their lives, stand in greatest need, have usually the smallest share; for either they are absent upon the account of idleness, or spleen, or hatred to religion, or in order to dose away the intemperance of the week: or if they do come, they are sure to employ their minds rather any other way, than regarding or attending to the business of the place.

The accident which happened to this young man in the text, hath not been sufficient to discourage his successors; but, because the preachers now in the world, however they may succeed St. Paul in the art of setting men to sleep, do extremely fall short of him in the working of miracles, therefore men are become so cautious, as to choose more safe and convenient stations and postures for taking their repose, without hazard of their persons; and upon the whole matter, choose rather to trust their destruction to miracle, than their safety.

We hate some persons because we do not know them; and we will not know them because we hate them. Those friendships that succeed to such aversions are usually firm, for those qualities must be sterling that would not only gain our hearts, but conquer our prejudices. But the misfortune is, that we carry these prejudices into things far more serious than our friendships.—Thus, there are truths which some men despise because they have not examined; and which they will not examine, because they despise. There is one single instance on record where this kind of prejudice was overcome by a miracle; but the age of miracles is past, while that of prejudice remains.

Valuable Real Estate FOR SALE.

IN pursuance of powers vested in me by the last will and testament of William Twitty, dec. I offer for sale all that valuable Tract of Land in Warren county, on which said William lived at the time of his death, containing thirty-two hundred and sixteen acres. On it is a valuable Grist & Saw Mill, both lately repaired—and a large and commodious two story dwelling-house with the necessary outhouses, which with some repairs may be made a comfortable reception for a numerous family. There is a large body of Low Grounds on the waters of Fishing Creek, and a considerable quantity of good wood land attached to this tract. Eight hundred acres of this land are subject to a life estate, which interest I have good reasons to believe can be purchased at a fair price.—The balance of the land is also subject to the dower of the widow; which I can confidently say may also be purchased. This land would be sold privately on very accommodating terms, for a great part of the money, the purchaser paying the interest annually & giving good & satisfactory security for the performance of his contract. If this land should not be disposed of before the 22d day of August next (it being the 2d day of Warren Court) on that day it will be offered at public sale at the Market-House in the town of Warrenton. The Executor reserves to himself the privilege of a bid.

It is thought unnecessary to give a minute description of this land, as those who may wish to purchase will view it and judge for themselves.
