Office open from 8.30 A. M. to 5 P. M. All letters to be delivered in the United States, including drop letters, must be prepaid, or they will be sent to dead letter office, unless addressed to Heads of Bureaus at Washington, D. C. GEO. W. NASON, Jr., P. M.

THE BENEFIT TO-NIGHT--Do not forget that the grand complimentary benefit to Mrs. T. J. JACKSON takes place at the Theatre to-night. In answer to the suggestion that reserved seats be sold in the dress circle, we would state that the experiment has been tried, and found impracticable. Gentlemen carrying ladies, to-night, need have no fears in regard to the occupancy of these seats. For, of course, no gentleman would remain seated in a theatre or any other place, whilst a lady remained standing. The benefit bids fair to be a complete success. We learn that Mr. Cox has kindly volunteered the aid of his vocal talent for the occasion, and those who attend will be charmed by the melody of his voice.

THE creatures who were guilty of attacking the building in which a church meeting was being held, one night last week, should be ferreted out, if possible, and brought to justice. It is a sad condition of affairs when people are disturbed in the worship of God by lawless persons. We have seen one of the missiles which were thrown through the window sash. It is nearly half of a brick.

We publish elsewhere a beautiful little poem from the pen of a gentleman who is temporarily engaged in this section of the country. There is a beauty and simplicity in the idea and versification which cannot fail to attract. We hope to hear often from our contributor.

WILL RESIGN.--We understand that Judge WARREN, Senator elect from Beaufort county, has resigned his seat in the Legislature, and that M. D. CARTER, Esq., will be a candidate for the same at an election very soon to be held in that county.

Written for the New Bern Daily Times.

WHAT IS LOVE?

TO JOSEPHINE
Pray tell me, what is love?
Dear Josephine thou never known the feeling?
The answer only comes with the revealing,
And that thy heart will prove.
To love and be loved
Is something deeper than in lover's seeming;
It is something grander than in poets' dreaming,
When most profoundly moved,
'Tis neither joy nor pain,
But like the two within the bosom blending,
A smile through tears, a rainbow beauty lending,
The dear united twin.
To feel the spirit's chords
Swept by another's touch divinely trilling,
While every conscious nerve, of being thrilling,
No utterance finds in words,
To know that rapturous hour,
By the sweet sense of harmony infowing--
His soul-harp answers to thine own unknowing,
In love's electric power,
What's love? the heart's deep rest:
To find the one the soul had long been seeking,
And through the dim years its lone vigil keeping,
And lean upon that breast.
And feel no more alone,
That we have won of Heaven a priceless treasure,
A human gem above all human measure,
And all, ay, all, our own.
For whom 'tis joy to live;
To whom the spirit offers, humbly kneeling,
All its rich garniture of thought and feeling,
And sighs for more to give,
And thus to love before
This dearer, larger self our own commanding,
And all our nature ever more expanding,
Is love; yet, love is more.
Know not what is love!
Save 'tis the whole, deep mystery of being,
That none can comprehend but the All-seeing!
Sweet friend, will learn above!
J. Meddison,
New Bern, N. C., Jan. 18th, 1866.

THE BEST OF STOVES.--Somebody up in Yankee land has invented a stove which, with neither lamp nor wick, coal, wood nor gas, heats itself; boils, bakes, does all sorts of cooking and heating; stands on castors; is easily trundled about the house, and is altogether one of the most interesting Yankee notions that we have seen in the stove line for a very long time. The fuel employed is hydro-carbon vapors produced from the cheapest grade of petroleum oil. The apparatus makes no smoke, soot or ashes. Its construction is simple, and cannot be costly. It is said to cost not above half as much for fuel as the best wood coal stoves.

The Knoxville correspondent of the Nashville Banner gets of the following good thing on Brownlow:

"Didn't That Man Suffer!"

KNOXVILLE, Jan. 9, 1866.
There are few East Tennesseans who do not know John Fleming, of this county, a lawyer of much sharpness, with a good practice, and, as far as I can learn, of undoubted loyalty. Well, John tells a most amusing anecdote of our Reverend Governor, which is too good to be lost, and what is more to the point, he gives it as coming from Andy Knott, who is also a well-known citizen, and one who bears a good record for consistent loyalty. The pith of the matter is contained in a description of Brownlow's terrible sufferings and martyrdom, of which the world has heard so much for the past two years. A few months ago Brownlow sued Sneed, Crozier and Reynolds for damages, and recovered $25,000 in the Circuit Court at Knoxville, causing the property of those gentlemen to be sold out, and buying it in at his own price; property that would, in all probability, in peaceable times, have brought twice the amount of the judgment. After all this had occurred, Squire Knott meets Fleming, who was one of the Governor's lawyers (by the way they are all Colonel Heiskill's constituents), on Gay street, and accosts him thus:

"Well, Fleming! I suppose you succeeded in recovering $25,000 damages for Governor Brownlow for and on account of his sufferings as a Union man?"
Fleming:--Yes, Andy, we had no trouble, and could have recovered $50,000 just as easy, if we had laid it out."
Knott:--Well, John, there's no telling how much that man has suffered. When he was put in jail at Knoxville I was in there for my Unionism also, with about one hundred others. We eat bull beef and sour bread, and slept on the muddy floor without cover, whilst Brownlow had a feather bed to sleep on, and had chicken, coffee, warm biscuit, and anything that his family and friends desired to send him: Great God! Fleming, didn't he suffer! Directly we were all sent to Mobile and Tuscaloosa, and treated worse than damaged dogs, while Brownlow was furnished with a guard to protect him from rebels, and sent safely through the lines to Abraham's bosom. Great God! Fleming, didn't that man suffer!

Well, we lay in prison and came darned nigh starving and being eat up with vermin, itch, &c., while Brownlow collected half a dozen East Tennesseans in Yankee land, organized a travelling menagerie and showed at 50 cents a night, child drep and niggers half price, and made lots of money and kept it all himself and never fed his animals at all. Fleming, Good God, did you ever hear of such suffering? Then he wrote a book--an abolition book--and sold an interest in the copyright, for $10,000 in cash, and the damned rebels sent his family through the lines to him, where they were all feted, toasted and lionized. Fleming, how could mortal man endure such suffering? No sooner had old Burns taken East Tennessee, than he and his family were sent back home, the United States Government furnishing ambulances, teams and guards for them! When Brownlow reached Knoxville, he took possession of the custom house as special treasury agent, at a salary, and appointed a set of "ironside aids," and the soon collected about $50,000 worth of abandoned rebel property, which has never been accounted for to this day! Great God, Fleming, didn't that man suffer!

Judge a man by his actions; a poet by his eye; a knave by his feet; a player by his strut; an Irishman by his swagger; an Englishman by his rotundity; a Scotchman by his shrug; a justice by his gown; a great man by his modesty; a tailor by his agility; and a woman by her heatness.
