BUSINESS-LIKE. -- Messrs. MITCHELL & ALLEN. dealers in agricultural implements, hardware, &c., in this city, have paid over seventeen hundred dollars for advertising since they commenced business, less than a year ago. This looks like business, and, in fact, it is business, for they have probably done four or five times as much as they would have done without resorting to that means. If you want to succeed in business, be sure to advertise liberally.

We have one satisfaction that a day of retribution is coming, and these wretches will receive their just reward.

ROBBERY .- Robbery still appears to be the order of the day, or rather nights. The store of Mr. J. H. ROBEBTSON, on Middle street, was entered night before last by some unknown individual, by pulling off a board near a window and then unkeying the window so as to open it and have free access to the store. STILL ANOTHER ROBBERY .- The residence of Mr. H. W. Jones, on Middle street, was entered night before last and nine dollass lifted from his wallet. Friday night must have been a fine night for robberies, at least one would think so from reading our "local column."

Mr. EDITOR: Yesterday morning about the time the mail train arrived from Morehead, an old man made his appearance near the railroad depot, dressed in part in an officer's uniform, and partly in a civilian's costume. He had a sword and belt, and assumed command of a number of carts and drays that were coming from the train. Before proceeding far, hewever, the crowd of young darkies that followed in his wake became so large and noisy that the wouldbe commander absquatulated without even conferring his command to a subordinate and made tracks as fast as possible for the market, at the foot of Middle street When he arrived there, to a perfectly safe retreat, as he supposed., he met Aunt Land, the old colored woman who is continually collecting rents, or at least trying to .-When the old woman saw him she thought he was General Burnside, and that he had come back to restore to her all the property that she claims to have lost during the war. As the old man was resting himself aboard a boat at the dock, she Baptist Church-Rev. A. D. Conen, 10 a. m., called out to him and asked him to come ashore and go up to the Gaston House with her and take a little brandy. The old man declined, but agreed to meet her there next morning and arrange her matters in a satisfactory manner. She told him that when he was here before that she went abeard the gunboats to see him, and she thought it rather hard that he could not as much as go up to the hotel.

The old man replied that he was tired and wanted rest, and that her property should be restored to her as soon as the war was over whereupon the old woman went off contented the old man chackling in his sleeve that he should pass for as noted a man as the Gen. (now Governor) BURNSIDE of Rhode Island.

After the old woman had left the wharf, she said to some one that the General looked bad, and she thought he must have had a hard time since leaving here, which was in 1862. The old man did look hard, and when asked where helhailed from, replied "On the coast, halfway between h-l and Hatteras." He was what would be termed in the army a "rusty cuss."

We saw this antiquated personage pass down Craven street, in front of our office, taking the middle of the street, and bowing politely to all who noticed him, with a crowd of little negroes still after him. The spectacle was very amusing, altogether, for it was difficult to decide which was anterior in point of time, himself or his dress; and then, it was evident that he had acquired his education and ideas of thoroughfares before sidewalks were fashionable in small towns like this.

COMMUNICATED. MENTALITY OF THE SEXES.

BY SENIOR FRATRUM.

Previous to the mighty struggle through which we have just passed, no subject save one was more mooted than the one heading this article. The advocates of women's rights claimed for the lovely fair equality. It was argued that in many respects woman was man's equal, in some, his superior. Loving poets were ever ready to sing of her superiority. The believers in petticoat government longed to see our votes strengthed by admitting women to cast their minds into the ballot-box; nay, to held the reigns of government itself. On the other hand, were those who claimed for the lords of creation the superiority, while there were others who admitted only equality, and there are many of the latter now.

Now, if inconsistency will be forgotten, the subject will be easily decided. To say that it pastor of the Baptist Church in this city, on to marry helpmates, and not be "unequally Johnson street, was entered night before last, and | woked together," when we have no equals to help us, is, to say the least of it, not only immoral, we term mean robbery, for any one black or but is also a conclusion without a foundation. Is the female fox as cunning as the male? Do not all hunters know the superiority of cunningness in the male deer? How seldom he dares risk himself in open woods, where the foot of man treads. Why does not the, female of Mocking birds, and many other birds also, please us with chanting imitations, or charming originals? Have they not as many musc.es, bones, mouths and heads as the male? Most certainly; but they are deficient in that part of the brain which produces songs or the imitation. And it is so a sight more wonderful toan perpetual motion. upon no summent information. If Mr. Patterson Mentality, or more appropriately, incl.ct, is one thing, tenderness of feeling or devotional, or mes of responsible persons who were in a posiemotional activity of n.ind, as quite another. tion to substantiate it. Mr. Hendricks contend-The question is: Is woman as intellectual, as a ed that even if Mr. Patterson had held a the reasoning faculty of mind? Has she the been out of the Umon, and the functions of such All agree that we man has more sympathy, more affection, more benevolence, more religion, than on of Mr. Collamer. Senators Howard and Fesman. It is her nature to soothe the rugged path senden came promptly to the rescue of Sumner of the sterner sex. It is woman that cheers man and succeeded in inducing the Senate to pass the in his distress. When man's hopes are blasted, resolution. In the course of the discussion, Mr. and the fruits of toil are gone from him, it is sated that his colleague was desirous that an hope. When man is plunged into the gulf of explanation, and that he would be perfectly wilwayward destruction, it is woman that holds out ling to have his claims to a seat fully investito him the olive branch of reform, and pleads in angelic tones for the adoption of "a better way."

equal in intellect. We are aware that a few women have proved that women may be warriors, philanthropists, or teachers, poets, preachers or physicians, but where there has been one Joan of Arc, there have been many Hannibals, Cæsars, Napoleons, Wellingtons, Washingtons. There have been a few Hannah Moores, but how many Howards, Oberlins, Gosses, Reeses, and many others et id omne? Is it not true in every rofession that to one really intellectual woman there are a thousand men more intellectual. But the only correct mode of reasoning on this subject is that dictated by, and based upon, the science of mind. That science teaches that the cerebrum of man is larger and heavier than that of woman. In the demestic region woman's brain is larger than man's, so with the moral and benevolent parts. Man has more brain in the intellectual region. It is also true that man is larger in the selfish region.

Now the brain being the organ of mind, it nust follow that whichever sex possesses the greater portion of the intellectual region of brain, is the more intellectual. Where is the voman whose cerebrum weighed any way near what that of Burns, or Napoleon, or Webster, or any other great man's did? has the female world ever produced one woman whose intellect would compare with Humboldt's or Webster's? one whose analytical talent would compare with that of Gall, or Butler? one whose depth of reason would compare with even a third rate metaphysician? To put the question within a nut-shell, what woman has the world produced noted for profound judgment, or logical greatness, or philosophical wisdom, or even great strength of intellect? Feeble echo whispers where is she?

A RICHMOND MAN IN LUCK .- A letter received from Nachez, Mississi; pi, says the Richmond Times, dated the 4th of July, from a well known, responsible citizen of that place, communicates the intelligence that a young man, named Manheim, hailing from this city, had recently fallen heir to a handsome fortune. The following extract from the letter, the original of which is in our possession, will explain the particulurs:

"There is a young man here who hails from Richmond, Virg.nia. His name is Judah Man-heim. He came here without a cent of meney about one month ago. It appears that during the war he d.d a great many favors for an old man from England, who was on a visit to this country, and since the man has gone home he was taken sick and died, and in his will he leaves this young man, Manheim, a fortune of ($500,out, five hundred thousand deliars. The young man leaves here in a few days for Liverpool to get his money. All the girls here are trying to captivate him, but it seems he is of Jewish parents and does not notice them. He tells me ne has some relatives residing in Richmond, but will not name them. Therefore I write this to you so they can find out his whereabouts. 1 have understood that he was a Federal detective during the war, and did similar favors for different parties, who are also going to give him a handsome fortune. He says when he returns to this country he will have money enough to get even with some person in Richmond, who he says has done him a great deal of harm. He has already drawn a check for two thausand dollars to pay his expenses across the water.

REPEAL OF THE NEUTRALITY LAWS. Washington, July 26 .- Mr. Banks, Chairman of the Committee on Foreign Affairs, reported a till to-day for the repeal of the neutrality laws, and substituting therefor a law which places us upon an equality with other nations. He exlained in a clear and forcible manner the purose and need of the change, and earnestly advocated its passage. He was opposed by Mr. Raymond, of New York, of the same committee, and Mr. Patterson, of New Hampshire. They "Would not be Telerated."

The Washington Intelligencer calls "the idea of calling a convention of southern loyalists" "extremely tarcical," and adds : "It is called to assemble in Philade: phia, because there is no place in any southern State where such a convention would be tolerated."

If anything were needed to show not merely the expediency but the absolute necessity of the Republican or Union party holding, as quickly as possible, a great national convention in some central city of the Southern States, such an atrocious sentence as this must make it clear. A convention of original and faithful Union men would not be tolerated" in the Southern States, says the Intelligencer ! That is a matter which, in the general interest and for the common welfare, must be tried . once. It will not do for us to suffer a revival of the of the old intolerance of opinion which brought the rebellion upon us. The unconditional Unionists of the Southern States may be in a minority, but if there were but one such man in each Sate they would have a right to meet in convention, and they must be protected in the exercise of that right. It is too late to talk such nonsense as the Intelligencer's intol-

Wise men may see, however, in this attitude of the Intelligencer and other reactionary Southern journals, that they fear the creation of an unconditional Union party in that region. They are conscious that such a phenomenon would produce a striking change in Southern politics. They know that with two parties established there, it would require but a little time to enlighten the mass of the Southern people, and bring them to correct political conclusions.

Knowing all this, the reactionaries rejoice that the Republican leaders have not yet made any movement to enter that field. They are gratified at this blunder; they see, with a grin of triumph, the Hamilton-Stokes convention called to meet at Philadelphia, instead of in a Southern city. They cannot conceal their satisfaction-"it

It is not too late yet; will not the Republican leaders if, indeed, they mean to maintain their party organization—call a convention of their party to meet, as soon as possible, in a Southern city—in Montgomery, say? Will they not pro-cure the adjournment of the Southern loyalist convention to meet them at that place? We know that the mass of the northern Republicans would welcome such a movement; and for the Southern Republicans the meeting of this convention would be a great and important event. We should then know whether the free utterance of opinion is to be suppressed or not in any part of the Union .- Evening Posts
