Cheerful Under Difficulties.
At Canterbury, N. H., lives Lyman B. Foster, who was brought home at the close of the war on a lounge from which he has not risen since. He was wounded in the left thigh; the ball rained there still; and he can neither sit up or lie down, but reclines, as he has done through all these years, at an angle midway between the horizontal and perpendicular. He now busies himself by teaching classes who come to his room, and by this means and his pension support himself well. He has also organized a literary society in the town that is flourishing finely. He is continually cheerful, and says he doesn't regret going to the war. What is more, he will be carried on his couch election day, three miles away to the Town Hall to vote for Grant!

He Will Swear.
A story is told of two prominent ministers of Newport, the favorite New England summer resort, which is too good to be lost. Rev. Dr. T. of the Tri-itarian Congregational Church, and Rev. Mr. B. of the Unitarian, being on the best terms, were one day invited to dine at the house of a mutual friend. Mr. B., for some reason, failed to come, and some one at the table took occasion to remark upon his excellent qualities. "Yes," said Dr. T., "he is a fine man; but isn't it a pity he will swear?" Mr. B. answered, "What do you mean?" "The general exclamation from all sides." "Mr. B. is a very fine man," persisted the Doctor, "but I am sorry to say that he sometimes swears." Being pressed for an explanation, he finally yielded. Sometime before the two had been out fishing together, and as the Doctor stood on one rock, he heard some conversation between Mr. B. and a fisherman, who were at a little distance from another. The fisherman said, "I've got a d— good bite." "So have I," answered Mr. B. "You see," persisted the Doctor, "that, though Mr. B. is a very fine man, he will swear."—Boston Evening Journal.

The Trial of Hardy Jones for the Murder of Robert Miller.
The court room was crowded yesterday morning at the usual hour, 10 o'clock, to witness the trial of the old man, Hardy Jones, charged with the murder of Robert Miller, one of the guard deputed by Justice Brown to commit Jones to jail on the charge of larceny.
The prisoner is an old man, apparently about fifty years of age. When arraigned before the bar he manifested the utmost indifference, and throughout the trial he bore himself like unto one of the 110 slaves; his countenance was as immovable from signs of emotion or fear as that of Socrates when he took the fatal bowl of hemlock and put the poisoned chalice to his lips; the face of the Rock of Gibraltar never presented a more solid appearance. There was about one hour's conversation with a jury. The Judge's charge was concise and able.
John M. Thorp, one of the guard who was in charge of Jones with Miller when the killing place, was the first witness called. Thorp's testimony bore the evidence of truth and honesty throughout, "sought not down in malice," Henry Bennett, another one of the guard, testified in corroboration of Thorp's testimony. Justice Brown, the committing magistrate, was put upon the stand, but his testimony was chiefly about the primary points in the case and was not of vital importance as the preceding witnesses. Dr. Duffy, the surgeon who had Miller's case in charge, detailed the full particulars of the condition of the wound from the time he first saw it, which was the day after the shooting, up to the time of the death of the murdered man.

The Sheriff, O. Habbs, testified as to his receipt on of the prisoner and the wounded guard at the county jail, from the custody of Thorp and Bennett the condition of the wounded man at that time, &c. This closed all the testimony on the part of both the State and the defence.
The counsel for the prisoner, Mr. Haughton, was able and eloquent, and he did full justice to his client; the court house was crowded, and he was listened to with great attention. The Solicitor with his usual ability did the prosecution full justice.
The jury, after an absence of about two hours, returned with a verdict of guilty of murder.
This case virtually closes the criminal docket, and the civil docket will be taken up next week, and as there are 400 cases on it there is little probability that all of them will be disposed of, and a special term of the court will be necessary during the winter.

STATERINGS.
Wilson wants a fire police.
Presbyterian billiards amuses the Hickory Tavernites.
The Wilson Ledger presents a neat and handsome appearance.
Sweet potatoes are selling at fifty cents per bushel in Wilson.
Some lands in Ridsville are worth $47 50 per acre.
The Banner of Temperance will hereafter be called the "Spirit of the Age."
Patrick McCortney, of Wilmington, died of congestive chill Tuesday evening, says the Star.
The County Commissioners, says the Danbury Reporter, are to have a poor house built.
Judge Cloud has appointed Mr. Venable Clerk of Stokes Superior Court, vice James Martin, resigned.
W. F. Alston accidentally killed West Conn, while out hunting, says the Watkinson Gazette.
Washington jail has nine inmates awaiting their trial on the charge of murder in the first degree.
The editor of the Washington Express has been confined to his house since the 16th inst., on account of sickness.
The Roanoke News says: "The new Baptist Church of Weldon will be completed about the first of December."
The N. C. R. R. schedule has changed, and the Eastern bound mail arrives at R. Delight at 5:55; A. M., and the Western at 8 P. M.
Johnston Superior Court, Judge Watts presiding, is now in session. There are no capital cases to try, and the civil docket is very small.

The very first issue of the Petersburg Index gets off the following: "Mattress-idea-killing bugs that infest beds."
That is a very good idea (idea.)
"Slim Attendance. Where was the Greeley and Brown Club Monday night? The attendance at Mr. John Hall was rather meagre. We saw on the speakers' stand, the pleasant countenance of President Busbee. But where was the club itself? The Era has been advertising for it, but it seems not yet found. It ought to have been out in full numbers, with banners, transparencies, &c.—Daily News.
Ex-Republican and Confederates meeting in Greeley and Brown Clubs, is shaking hands over the bloody chasm with as much success as you can mix oil and water.
CAMPAIGN NOTES.
H. G.
In White House window, bright and warm, He dreams he sees Ulysses' form, Then yanks his trousers high and higher, Rips fiercely out and screeches in ire: "I'm going West!"
Greeley has taken to novel reading. He is now perusing "Under Two Flags."
Five thousand people were at a Republican meeting at Rochester the other night to hear Senator Conkling.
The Springfield Republican calls upon Douglas to stop lying. Would it have him let his only talent lie unused?
The Greeley candidate for Congress in the Seventeenth District of Illinois said that he "wanted to see Jeff Davis back in the United States Senate."
Tammany is sending money into the Ninth Ohio District to help elect Mo'gan. He lost one of the checks the other day, and the little game was exposed.
It is a comforting fact that every one of the slanders heaped upon the President by the Tribune, this year, are triumphantly refuted in the columns of the Tribune last year.
Frank H. Hurd, who is the Democratic candidate for Congress in the Sixth Ohio District, and was an out and out Copperhead during the war, is now pretending to be a war Democrat.
The Pittsburg Commercial has sworn proof that Buckalew, like Hendrix, was a member of the treasonable orders during the war, and in collusion with Jeff Davis, for whom the members cheered loudly at their meetings.

THE THREE CROWS.
There were three crows set up in a tree, Charles S. [?], [?], and [?].
These crows that sat up in the tree, Were as black as any crows could be.
Says Charles unto each other mate, "What shall we do for grub to eat?"
"Try Grant," says Carl; "I know he could provide us with some wholesome food."
"He has refused," says Horace G., "And that's why we are in this tree."
Then all exclaimed in solemn tone, "We'll pick his eyes out one by one."
Then Carl S. smiled on Horace G., And Horace, swung his B. Gratz B.
Says one of these old cunning crows, "What I know about Grant I'll now disclose."
"And should any one doubt that my words are true, He's a villain, traitor, and soon I'll too."
Says Charles to Carl, "We'll join the dance, With the old 'Bunt-Locks' he sold to France."
"An if that's not enough to win the day, We'll carry the war into Africa."
So to accomplish all these ends Charles writes unto his able friends.
He gave them all his views quite freely, Denouncing Grant and lauding Greeley.
Now, from the sequel you may know That Pompey was no friend to crow.
"G'long, Charly, honey, git away; What I care for Chappin' any day?"
Greeley with his little hatchet, Could never cut the slavery latchet.
"Away down here in Norf Carolina De soft-shell crab am not so pliant."
"We all go for General Grant, In spite of all your silly rant."
And Pompey laughed, it was no go; "Dis child," says he, "can't stand the crow."
Try Meadows & Co's Eau de Cologne and Ex't Jockey Club.
