DROWNED PERSONS.

The New York Post has for two days given its most prominent columns to the development of the theory of T. S. Lambert, that drowned persons are not dead, but are simply in a state of hibernation, and that the reviving agency is heat. The directions put forth for restoring the drowned and those otherwise suffocated are in substance these: It must first be appreciated that a person recently drowned is not dead, and will not be for a long time. When he is taken from the water turn his face down for a moment only, to allow any water in his nose or throat to run out ; then place him, out of currents of air, upon his back, with his head very slightly raised. Do not roll him upon a barrel, nor do anything else to "get the water out of his lungs," since there is none in them ; nor out of his stomach, since what he has swallowed will not do any harm. Quickly determine whether he must be carried to where heat is, or if it can better brought to or produced I nebber dig my taters till dey plenty big to near him. OLD-TIME PLUCK AND PATIENCE.-An old gentleman was talking yesterday about plack. Said he: "I went to Missouri in 1844. Every day families came in from the East with nothing save what they could bring on a four-horse wagon. They would settle on 160 acres of land, get out the logs, and build a rude cabin. They He didn't waste his money when experunce had no sugar, no coffee, no comfortable food, but they lived some way. They made themselves a sort of syrup from pumpkins; they scorehed wheat and made wheat coffee; with a hand machine they broke their corn so as to make a sort of bread, and all the How much yo'spen' upon yo'se'f! I wish time kept to work, kept raising babies and lived. They shot turkeys, prairie chickens, and squirrels for meat, and scuffled along. I used to watch their progress, and it was a certain thing that in the fourth or fifth year after their arrival they would build themselves a comfortable house and turn the original cabin into a stable. Now the sons of those people are the solid men of Missouri, and the daughters and grand daughters of those pioneer mothers wear robes, a single one of which cost more than the en-It was a calm, still night, a soft air tire capital of the average Missonri pioneer." - Virginia (Nev.)
