We can appeal to the supreme tribunal of the American people against the corruption of the Republican party, and of their untold violations of constitutional liberty. With him as our chieftain the bloody banner of the Republicans will fall from their palsied grasp. Oh, my, countrymen, in this supreme moment, when the destines of the republic are at stake, when the liberties of the people are imperilled, I rise to present to the thoughtful consideration of this Convention the name of one who on the field of battle was styled 'The Su-

To such perfection has the system been carried that Judge McWhorter very seldom has any occasion to punish delinquents, for the "convict courts" take them in charge and have the lash used upon them with sufficient severity, promptness and impartiality. John Arnold, colored, who was sent to the chaingang for the cruel beating of a child, is the sheriff. It is said John is proud of his office, and that it is with great satisfaction that he receives a subject to work upon. Daniel Winfield, colored, was judge of the "county court," but we learn they turned him out of office for mal-practice, which consisted in settling a criminal case. Some of the State's justices might take good lessons on this point from the Greene county convicts.

Gen. Hancock's Daughter. New York World.

The beautiful and accomplished daughter of General Hancock was just about to enter society when she died on Governor's Island. She was the pride of her parents' hearts and they lived in their thoughts of her. Only the other day General Hancock said that he had no wish or chance to be a candidate, and that all he had been living for was gone. Mrs. Hancock, whom the General married in St. Louis, was recently told that she would be the next lady of the White House, and she replied that her heart was not in the White House but in her daughter's grave. The General is quite broken-hearted over his loss. He did not dream of a nomination, and up the last moment believed that his name was being mentioned only in a casual way and that it would be dropped when the balloting began.
