The California people are again airing their grievances against Japan and causing the President and his cabinet to spend many anxious hours over this very delicate question. They have a bill before the Legislature to prohibit foreigners who do not expect to soon become naturalized citizens of the United States from acquiring title to real estate in California. The Japanese people and their government have rightly interpreted this bill as aimed specially at them. While the President has no authority to say to a State what kind of laws it must not enact, still he is expected to use his influence to convince the Californians that they should not involve the whole country in war with a foreign nation on account of a domestic question affecting the people of that State alone. The Japanese government has made protest to President Wilson because it cannot deal with a State government. And on account of the reserved and constitutional rights of the States, our general government has no power to act in the matter except in an advisory capacity. President Roosevelt had the same question to deal with and managed to scare the Californians from their purpose by holding up the imminence and seriousness of war with Japan. This served to postpone the trouble instead of effecting a permanent policy. President Wilson will try to convince the Californians of their duty to observe the treaties of the United States with Japan and other foreign countries and to make as permanent as Monroe did the doctrine of non-entanglement with foreign powers, the doctrine that all States should hold the treaty rights that our general government has entered into with other governments above the rights of individual States.

The Democrats of the House have completed their work in caucus on the new tariff bill. They considered it schedule by schedule, adopting in every case the rates prepared by the committee and approved by the President, and then adopted the bill as a whole, by an overwhelming majority last Saturday. This commits all the Democrats to vote for the bill when it comes to a vote in the House for final passage, except a few members from sugar and wool States, who asked to be relieved from the caucus action. The bill will be debated about two weeks and then about two weeks more will be taken up in considering it by sections. The final vote will be reached about the middle of May. The Senate will take about the same length of time on the bill, reaching the final vote some time in July. The bill is framed to meet the promises of the party as set forth in the Baltimore platform and in the campaign. It leaves sufficient protection to all industries to make up for the difference in wages paid in this country and the wages paid by foreigners and at the same time makes sufficient reductions to insure cheaper clothing, shoes, farm machinery, sugar and all articles of necessity. It insures a reduction of the cost of living to the millions of farmers and laborers and people of small means and small incomes, without crippling any industry that will be satisfied with reasonable and legitimate profits. The big monopolists object to giving the people any part of the enormous differences in the price paid by consumers here and consumers abroad, preferring of course that they shall continue to collect this tribute from all the people for their own personal benefit, but President Wilson and the Democratic Congress are paying no attention to their threats. They have studied the question thoroughly and are determined to do justice to the people as a whole.

Some of the State papers are speaking in commendation of the law that Senator Jack Reinhardt had passed in the session of 1911 prohibiting the killing of heifer calves in Catawba and Lincoln counties. The law would be a good one if it were observed. But it needs to have one word, "heifer", stricken out and then made applicable to the whole State. The law is evaded. There is a man at Hickory who makes a business of buying calves, and nearly every day sends off by express from one to half a dozen carcasses. And, although we have no personal information about it, there is a general suspicion that as many of them are heifers as the other kind. The quickest way to increase the supply and reduce the price of beef would be for all the States to enact a law prohibiting the slaughter of calves under two years old. The new division of marketing farm products that the Department of Agriculture is organizing, should make a study of this question and try to secure from the States a uniform law.

An election was held last week in a Massachusetts district to fill a vacancy in Congress caused by the election of former Representative Weeks to the Senate. In November Weeks had 2,000 majority over his Democratic opponent. In the special election last week the same Democrat who was defeated last fall was elected over his Republican opponent by over 4,000 majority. The sole issue was the Democratic tariff bill now before Congress and the policy of President Wilson for lower tariff and cheaper clothing and cheaper food. This result does not indicate that the Democratic party will lose votes by carrying out its campaign promises.

Newton R. 2.

Mr. H. B. Yount and family of East Hickory spent Saturday and Sunday in this section visiting relatives and friends. Our young friends enjoyed a singing at the home of Mr. J. M. McRee Sunday afternoon.

Mr. Poly McRee is building a new barn on his farm near Mt. Olive church.

Mr. Jacob Wike of Conover spent Sunday in this section. Our farmers are putting in full time since the ground has gotten dry enough to work preparing land and planting.

Some fields are badly affected with the new disease of the oats. It is not the blues this time for it causes the oats to turn red, and almost kills it.

U. D. C. District Meeting.

The district meeting of the Daughters of the Confederacy will be held in Hickory on Friday, April 25th, with the Atal A. Shuford Chapter as hostess.

This, the sixth district, is composed of the chapters in Hickory, Newton, Lenoir, Morganton, Mt. Airy, Leaksville-Spray and North Wilkesboro, with Mrs. Wm. H. Overman of Salisbury as director. The object of the meeting is to discuss the work and devise means of increasing enthusiasm among the members. The ladies from the different chapters will arrive in Hickory on the morning trains of the 25th, where they will be met by a delegation of Hickory Daughters and escorted to the home of Mrs. E. B. Cline, where luncheon will be served, after which the meeting will be held. Quite a large delegation will attend from here.

News and Comment.

The committee of 18 men appointed to revise the constitution of the State met in Raleigh Monday and organized by electing Mr. A. M. Scales of Greensboro chairman. A motion was carried to appoint 15 sub-committees, one to each section of the constitution. An adjournment till some time in the summer will be taken to give the sub-committees time to prepare their drafts. This is a very important work and the committee has an opportunity to do great service to the State.

Representative Godwin had a talk with Postmaster General Barleson Monday and was informed that the Postmaster General was working on a plan that would insure the appointment of Democrats to all the fourth-class postoffices.

Senators Simmons and Overman intend to ask this week for the appointment of Mr. A. D. Watts as Collector for Western North Carolina. They will thus learn for a certainty whether President Wilson really objects to appointing Mr. Watts.
