THE REPUBLICANS WITHOUT AN ISSUE.

The Republican Congressional Campaign Committee will not print a campaign book this year. This is the first time in the recollection of present-day politicians that either of the two leading parties has not been able to take issue with the other party and give reasons why it should be given a majority in the House of Representatives of the next Congress.

There is a reason for this. The Democratic committee has issued a campaign book setting forth the work of the Wilson administration and the Democratic Congress. This record is so generally approved by the country at large, as was evidenced in the Maine election, that Republicans cannot attack it. They know they would lose votes by going before the people and attacking the Underwood-Simmons tariff law, which broke up monopolies and reduced custom rates to a revenue basis.

A number of Republicans in both houses voted with the Democrats for this reform bill, and up to the breaking out of the European war these lower duties and the income tax were yielding all the revenue the government needed and providing a healthy surplus, besides giving the consumers cheaper clothing, farming tools, sugar and many other things entering into the home life of the people.

The breaking out of war August 1st paralyzed our trade with Europe and importations have been greatly reduced. The customs taxes on account of the war do not yield sufficient revenue for the expenses of the government and the keeping of the reserve fund to the point needed to enable the treasury department to continue its assistance to the farmers in handling their crops without sacrificing them. For this reason, a special war tax on beer, wines and certain other luxuries to run during the war have been provided. This would have been necessary under the high protection tariff of the Republican era, for no tariff law will yield a normal amount of revenue when imports stop as they necessarily do when half the countries with which we trade cannot put a shipload of goods on the seas. These special war taxes were levied, as President Wilson insisted, only on luxuries and in a manner that they can be repealed immediately after the war ends and foreign trade is resumed. The Republicans were wise in not taking issue with the Democratic tariff law and the special taxes that make up for the loss of revenue under it during the war and keep the treasury in a position to furnish crop-moving money to the rural districts.

The next great work of the Democratic President and Congress was the passage of the currency bill. It provides an elastic currency. It divides the country into twelve districts, with one reserve bank each, linked with all the National banks of the district, and makes every section independent of other sections. It breaks Wall Street's control of the money of the country and makes panics impossible. If possible, this is a greater accomplishment than the reform of the tariff laws which took $100,000,000 of taxes off the backs of the poor and put it in the form of income tax on the rich, who under Republican administrations, paid but little to the support of the government. This currency law is so just and sufficient and popular that everybody is praising it. Republicans admit that they have been convinced for years that their currency laws were wrong and should have been repealed. But they dared not do it. The money powers to whom they looked for campaign contributions and the coercion of voters demanded their retention as the price of their support. These money lords also threatened Woodrow Wilson. Their lobbies swooped down on the Democratic Congress. But Wilson and Congress shut the doors in their faces and made a currency law that is acknowledged to be the best in the world. The pushing through of this bill by President Wilson in the face of the most powerful opposition that any President ever faced was the bravest act in the annals of American politics and American statesmanship.

Space will not permit us in this article to refer to the passage of the anti-trust bill, the cotton grading bill, the repeal of the canal toll exemption bill, the ship registry bill and others that stand to the credit of the Democratic administration.

The people of the United States stand at the back of Woodrow Wilson for his great services in their behalf and are going to give him a bigger majority in both houses of the next Congress than he has in this one. The Republicans of this Congress know this, or they would not have given up without a fight. The people of Catawba must have a part in the endorsement of the Wilson administration that will be recorded in thundering tones on the 3rd day of November. The way to secure their share in the endorsement is to get out the biggest Democratic vote ever polled in Catawba county for Lee S. Overman for United States Senator, E. Y. Webb for Congress and all the Democratic candidates for county officers.

THE YOUNG VOTERS.

The Republicans have been campaigning in this county for two months. They seem to think that they can make votes by mach talking and continuous solicitation. We have not heard any of their speeches, but we have noted that all their appointments so far have been in Republican communities. From this we infer that they are having trouble in holding the voters they have had in former campaigns from flying the coop.

We are not at all surprised that they are having trouble in keeping former Republicans from catching the enthusiasm for Woodrow Wilson that is sweeping the voters from all ranks into the Democratic party. This is especially so in the case of the young men, as Mr. Bryan said in his speech in Asheville, Woodrow Wilson is the kind of a man that appeals to young men who admire courage and greatness. He is a man who does things, and inspires others to do things. We enjoy on every young man in Catawba county to read what Mr. Bryan said last Saturday night in Asheville about the young men. It is food for thought for young Democrats and young Republicans alike. Young Republicans should not feel that they are bound to vote the Republican ticket because their fathers have been voting it. Woodrow Wilson came to proclaim and establish a "New Freedom." That was his first message. He has lived up to it, and has already broken many of the old shackles.

That the "New Freedom" of Woodrow Wilson has come to stay, we point young voters, Democratic and Republican boys alike, to the fact that no Republican to-day will take the stump and plead for the repeal of any law that Congress, through Woodrow Wilson's insistence, has passed, or plead for the reenactment of any Republican law that he has had repealed.

No man will go before voters today and say he would like to see the high tariff rates of the infamous Paine-Aldrich law reenacted.

No man will say that he wishes to see the Wilson income tax law repealed.

No man will say that he wishes the Wilson currency law repealed.

No man will say that he wishes the Wilson anti-trust law repealed and the trusts reenthroned.

No man will say that he wishes the ships of the shipping trust to be given back the privilege of going through the Panama canal at the expense of the government.

These are the beginning chapters of Woodrow Wilson's "New Freedom."

Young men, of all parties must see that no party can in the future live unless it accepts these great principles. And the fathers of the young men to-day will be doing their sons an injustice if they try to persuade their sons to reject the opportunity now to embrace the "New Freedom" of Woodrow Wilson. It is going to be the ruling spirit of this country for years and years. It will live and be the guiding star for Presidents and Congresses long after Woodrow Wilson passes over the River and is for all time held up to the youth of the land as the second father and redeemer of his country.

The Young Men's Party.

"I like to see these young men taking part. The Democratic party is more a young man's party today than it has been before in 50 years. The Democratic party is becoming a young man's party because young men look forward and the Democratic party is a forward looking party. The young man feels as he is going to be here for a long while, he must help to put things right and make the best possible conditions under which to live and he finds the Democratic party the party which tries to make things right. He finds the Democratic party based upon principles which are fundamental after a struggle of more than 50 years for the rescue of this nation from bondage to victory.

"I am glad we have these young men taking an active part and unless my prediction fails, you will find that at the November election, there will be more young men voting the Democratic ticket than have ever voted it before. —From W. J. Bryan's Asheville Speech.

Bryan At Asheville.

William Jennings Bryan spoke to a great audience in Asheville last Saturday night. It was the first political speech he has made since the election of 1912, which placed Woodrow Wilson in the White House.

He told of the work of the Wilson administration and said the way to endorse Woodrow Wilson was to vote for Democrats in next month's election. Of Woodrow Wilson he said:

"Woodrow Wilson is not only conscientious, but is on the people's side and the people know he is on their side. It means a great deal to this country to have a president who looks at every question from every standpoint and a president who is not afraid of all the influences that operate against justice. I have seen enough of him to know he is not afraid. I have been fighting now for some 20 years in national politics, and I have known a great many men, but from the time I entered politics, I have never found a braver man than Woodrow Wilson. We have had some tremendous questions to meet, we have dealt with some mighty problems, but he has not yet been afraid to meet a proposition. He has taken hold of the principles involved and has dealt with them so successfully that I believe it is safe to say the large majority of the American people thank God that Woodrow Wilson is an American.

Valuable Man.

"I say," cried the business man to the detective, "some fellow has been representing himself as a collector of ours. He has been getting in more money than any two of the men we have, and I want him caught as quick as you can." "Ah right. I'll have him in jail in less than a week." "Great Scott, man! I don't want to put him in jail. I want to engage him!" — Idea.

Republicans Without Campaign Material?

Democrats were amused at the report circulated today that the republican congressional campaign committee will not issue a text book this year on account of the failure of the committee to agree on the line of attack.

"The country is with Wilson, and any attempt to criticize him or his record would only make us ridiculous," said one Republican today. "Unless the Democrats are apathetic in November or remain away from the polls because of overconfidence, I can see only a reputation of the results of two years ago.

"We cannot attack the currency law, for its worth has been proved within the last few weeks. It would be fool-hardy to attempt to convince the people that they should return to the Payne-Aldrich tariff classification. They would laugh at us." —Washington Letter in Asheville Gazette-News.

New York Business Men Working For Cotton Relief.

New York, Sept. 28.—New York business men interested in the "buy-a-bale-of-cotton" movement met today and organized 14 sub-committees representing various trades and industries. Another committee with five members was appointed to look after the details of the work.

At the meeting a telegram was read from the Board of Trade of Tuscaloosa expressing appreciation of the interest shown by New York merchants and stating that a bale of cotton picked by the picanninies of Alabama was being sent as an expression of their gratitude.

Members of the Silk Association of America who also are interested in the movement have sent out a letter urging the necessity of helping the South in this year's emergency caused by its inability to dispose of its cotton in Europe and urging all who can afford to buy a bale.

Science and Art.

Science and art are in spirit the same and they must be pursued with the same ardor. The scientist, like the artist, must be ready to do any thing and go any where to get in touch with nature in his chosen field. He must keep no sacrifice of time or money too great to secure a real mastery of the technique of his profession. It is through weakness in technique that much of our science presents so amateurish an appearance. —Richard C. Maerlein in the Atlantic
