Racial Hatreds

"We are a white race and a Negro race here together—we are here to live together. The world at this time and in many lands is showing intolerance and showing hate. It seems sometimes that love has almost deserted the human bosom. It seems that hate has taken its place. It is only for a time, gentlemen, because in the great things in life no matter what they are, it is God's great principles, matters of eternal right, that alone live. Wrong dies and truth forever lasts, and we should have faith in that."

It was an Alabama judge who said that, a white man, a gentleman of the oldest American stock. Judge Horton, in charging the jury, was speaking only of the exhibitions of race prejudice in the course of the trial of the unfortunate Negroes who were convicted of assaulting two white women at Scottsboro, but he might have been speaking for and to all the world.

Not in many years perhaps not in centuries, have there been such violent outbreaks of racial hatreds as have been manifesting themselves in these troublous times. In Germany the Nazi government has proclaimed its hatred of the Jews to the point of barring them from almost every phase of the national life. Between the Germans and the Poles hatred is so intense that when the shadow of a German flag, on the Polish border, fell upon Polish soil, there was an indignant protest by the Polish government! The Italian people are developing a new national pride which has racial intolerance as its foundation. And we do not need to point to the racial hatreds which have barred the Orientals from Australia and the United States.

We do not by any means advocate opening the doors to all sorts and conditions of men, but we do believe that these racial hatreds are a step backward and not forward in the world's progress. We believe that it is possible for all the peoples of the world to get along amicably, since we are all in the world and can't get out of it. If it proves impossible, because of the stirring up of racial hatreds by prejudiced or malicious interests, then we can see nothing ahead but a complete collapse of civilization as we know it and a return to the Dark Ages when every man's hand was turned against his brother.

Putting City Men Outdoors

The great value of President Roosevelt's plan for putting a quarter of a million young men at work in outdoor labor, of a kind which is somewhat vaguely referred to as "forestry," seems to us to be that it will probably save most of these men from becoming bums.

As we understand the plan only those between 18 and 25 years old and having some dependent relatives were accepted at first. They applied at an Army recruiting station, armed with a letter from some recognized local relief or welfare association, testifying to their worthiness as objects of relief. They were then put through a physical examination at the recruiting station.

Those who passed these preliminary tests were required to enlist for six months, signing an agreement to perform whatever duties they might be assigned to and not to destroy any Government property. They then went at once on the payroll, at the rate of one dollar a day with food, clothing and shelter included. Each recruit, however, was required to sign an assignment of part of his pay, approximately three-quarters of it, to the dependent wife, mother, sister or brother, to be paid direct to the beneficiary.

It seems to us that the actual work accomplished is of less importance than the building up of the men who do it, getting them into the habit of hard work, enabling them to contribute something, however slight, to the support of others, and taking them off the city streets into the wholesome outdoors.

Changing The Language

Some time ago professors of English held a convention in Kansas City and among other things discussed the influence of newspapers upon the speech of the people. Some of the criticism was derogatory and some favorable.

What the professors had reference to was the short words used mainly in headlines. The editor or managing editor who writes the headlines makes a search for short words that will fit in the limited space available in one column or two columns. Sometimes, and not infrequently, the thought is expressed in a somewhat inelegant form.

Those not acquainted with the job of writing headlines can easily understand why "probe" has taken the place of "investigation" in the headlines. Five letters are simply easier to handle than thirteen. "Crash" is preferable to "collision"; "flay" is easier than "denounce"; "pact" fits better than "agreement"; "tilt" is much handier word than "athletic contest" or "basketball game"; and "blast" works better than "explosion."

Just so many letters go in a line of a certain kind of type, no more. A balance is necessary. "John Smith Killed Accidentally" wouldn't make a headline in any man's type. So the writer says, "John Smith Is" for one line and on the next line, "Killed In Wreck." Anyway that's an illustration.

The professors at the Kansas City convention ended their meeting without doing anything about the situation, Dr. Hopkins adding the remarks to the discussion:

"In theory that is our stand, but it does us little good to take any stand. We might as well quit and let the language go its way. It will anyway."

Probe, crash, tilt, blast and similar short words will always replace the longer ones in the headlines. Every headline represents an effort to attain a balance and if the thought is not fully expressed, it is because the writer couldn't find the proper word in the limited time he had to give to the writing of it.

A New Era

The woman who couldn't even vote until thirteen years ago is fast coming to her own in the political world. The President, who has paid little attention to precedent since taking office, has called into service the best minds available and most suitable to his program without regard to sex. This fact only makes the appointment of women to high office justifiable. There is nothing to commend a policy of naming women to high office merely because of sex.

However, it is a new era when a woman becomes secretary of labor and a woman is appointed ambassador to a foreign country. Both appointments broke all precedents.

The selection of Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen as envoy to Denmark meets the approval of the country. The daughter of the late William Jennings Bryan, she embodies many of his fine traits of character and ability.

OUR EX-PRESIDENTS (Knoxville Journal)

Americans have reasons to be proud of their only living ex-president.

Throughout his administration which witnessed the longest and most disastrous industrial and social upheaval in modern times, he labored intelligently and unceasingly for the welfare of his country.

He personally conducted a campaign for reelection that was characterized by a lofty appeal to the judgment of his countrymen for support of his ideals of government, and while millions gave their endorsement of his conduct of public affairs at a time that subjected men's souls to the supreme test of credulity, the overwhelming vote by which he met defeat did not disturb his equanimity nor decrease his faith in the virtue of self-government.

With the grace and dignity that befits the office he welcomed his successor and witnessed his inauguration without the slightest show of chagrin, maintaining to the last moment of his official life a keen and discriminating interest in matters requiring presidential action.

With the same unselfish and impersonal concern that prompted him to offer to collaborate in the closing days of his administration with the president-elect on pressing public problems, he gave up plans for an immediate needed rest and recreation after his retirement in order that he might be readily available for conference, if desired, with officials of the new administration concerning questions about which he might be able to give helpful information by reason of long experience.

Whatever differences of opinion may exist as to the political philosophy or administrative and executive ability of Herbert Hoover, there should be no division on the proposition that no man ever retired from the presidency at the behest of the popular will with more becoming modesty or with less show of personal grievance than he.

Whether he elects to remain a private citizen or whether he should essay to return to public office, it goes without saying that the former president will do nothing to lower the prestige of the position which he lately relinquished.

Skiping The Rope

"You look worried."
"Yes, I believe my husband is carrying on with another woman."

"Oh, well, I'll tell you what to do in a case like that. Give him plenty of rope, and—"
"Yes, I know. He'll skip!"

Circumstances Prevented

"Sorry I couldn't meet you at the club on Thursday. Did intend to, but—well circumstances over which I have no control—you know."

"Yes, quite. By the way, how is your wife?"

Living Image

"Don't you think that twins have an advantage over the average person?"
"Why?"
"Well, they can at least see themselves as others see them."

Unaccompanied

Boy—Sir, Dad, what does it mean when the paper says some man went to a convention as a delegate-at-large?
Dad—It means his wife didn't go with him, Son.
