Very Close But Still Alive

M. W. Beach, a member of The Journal-Patriot's mechanical force, had a very close shave Tuesday afternoon, but is still alive to tell the story.

Standing beside a truck in Wilkesboro watching a test of a carburetor, he was struck a glancing blow by a fan leaf which was hurled from the fan and went whizzing over a nearby building into space. A fraction of an inch and the jugular vein would have been severed by the leaf.

The leaf cut through the skin on his neck and ripped through the ear. Several stitches were required on the ear.

The motor of the truck was accelerated to a high speed in making the test and the leaf was hurled with tremendous force when it came off.
