Repeal Rally Is Addressed By Two Leading Speakers

John L. Morehead and Walter (Pete) Murphy Given Enthusiastic Hearing

URGE BIG REPEAL VOTE Say Prohibition-Created Racketeering and Crime Will Be Given Jolt

Urging a vote for repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment on November 7, John L. Morehead, Charlotte business man, and Walter (Pete) Murphy, Rowan county legislator, were given an enthusiastic hearing at the county-wide rally of Wilkes county repeal forces at the courthouse in Wilkesboro Tuesday evening.

Declaring that repeal is an integral part of the national administration's recovery program and that both Democratic and Republican leaders were united in their stand for repeal, Mr. Murphy asserted that he had "rather follow Franklin D. Roosevelt, Elihu Root and other great leaders of the country than Johnson Hayes and Yates Webb."

The meeting was called to order by W. H. McElwee, prominent young local attorney, who presented H. H. Morehouse, Wilkes county's repeal delegate. Mr. Morehouse said he had no intention of making a speech and would merely reiterate his stand for repeal.

Major A. L. James, Jr., a retired army officer of Laurinburg, who accompanied Mr. Morehead, was presented and in a few, well chosen words declared that prohibition had been a failure. "It has been the greatest force for evil that has ever existed," he said.

Mr. Morehead was introduced by Attorney J. M. Brown. The Charlotte man advocated a return to the doctrine of state's rights through repeal. Prohibition cannot be enforced, he declared.

Whether North Carolina votes for repeal or not, the Eighteenth Amendment will be blotted from the constitution on November 7, Mr. Morehead said. "Then why all this agitation in North Carolina?" he asked. "Simply because North Carolinians are not a bunch of hitch-hikers who will take the road of progress by thumbing a ride." A vote for repeal.

Warns Merchants To File Returns

Deputy Revenue Commissioner Clement Explains Requirement in Statement

A warning to merchants that they must not overlook the matter of filing sales tax returns for the quarter ending October 1 was issued Tuesday by B. C. Clement, deputy revenue commissioner, whose headquarters are located in this city.

Mr. Clement's statement follows:

"Many merchants in this territory apparently have failed to file sales tax returns for the quarter ending October 1st. These reports were due to be filed by October 15th. All merchants have been advised of this by letter from the Department of Revenue, in which they were instructed they should not wait to see the Field Representative before making their returns unless they found it impossible to make it otherwise.

"A list of delinquents in this territory will be furnished from the Department of Revenue within a few days and we are anxious that none of the merchants in this territory shall be found delinquent and penalized for default in payment of this tax, which they have collected from their customers. I am urging the merchants who have failed to file their returns to immediately do so and if necessary to get in touch with me about it. This is extremely important from their standpoint, as well as the standpoint of the Department of Revenue, which at all times, is ready to assist and co-operate all possible."

Mr. Clement's has his office at the city hall.

Automobile World Sees First Streamline Queen

You may not see the exact car design above at the automobile shows this winter or on the roads at an early day but it is a design shown by the Briggs company at an early Detroit show this month. It marks a radical change in design to eliminate every possible ounce of wind resistance; get stream-line; increase seating space by having no running board; and, amongst other things, a front wheel drive with engine in rear of car.

Ramblers Idle

Wilkesboro's gridiron Ramblers are idle this week and are making preparations for a return engagement with Harmony here on November 10. Coach Bennie Troutman is giving considerable attention to the defense which weakened in the recent game with Harmony and allowed three touchdowns in the second half after holding the opposition scoreless throughout the first two quarters.

"These figures show conclusively, it seems to me, that enforcement could be made effective and that the non-enforcement policy of the present administration is a failure."
