Westinghouse Representative To Be In City Next Week

A representative of the Westinghouse company will be in the city the first of the week to demonstrate the new 1934 model Westinghouse electric refrigerator at the Rhodes-Day Furniture show and at the show rooms of the Wilkes Electric Company, local distributors for the Westinghouse. All who are interested in buying an electric refrigerator for the coming season are requested to attend the demonstrations.

TODAY and TOMORROW

NAZI . . . aim, equality. I spent several hours the other evening with an old friend, an American citizen who has lived for many years in Germany.

"What is at the bottom of this revolutionary movement in Germany?" I asked him. His answer was prompt and concise. "The Treaty of Versailles," he replied. "The German people feel that they have been placed in a position of inferiority ever since the war. They are a proud people. They believe themselves superior to all other peoples. The present generation refuses to pay the price which its parents accepted to end the war. It took only shrewd leadership and an appeal to patriotic pride to arouse them to a new sense of nationalism. Everybody in Germany is in uniform. The military spirit is being cultivated. When the right time comes there will be another war unless the nations whom Germany regards as its enemies yield their rights under the Versailles treaty."

Other observers have told me the same thing. I think they are probably right. But I also think that the United States will not itself be drawn into another European war.

GOATS . . . were needed. "What is the motive behind the anti-Jewish activity of the Nazis?" I asked my friend.

"What was the motive behind the anti-Hoover activity in America?" he countered. "The people were in trouble and they needed a scapegoat. Mr. Hoover was elected the goat. It was easy for people to lay the blame for everything on him. "Just so the Nazi movement needed a goat. Why not the Jews? They were not numerous enough to set up serious resistance, only two percent of the population; but they were the bankers, merchants, industrialists, against whom it is always easy to stir up the populace of any nation. Nothing is easier than to arouse the poor and the lazy against the well-to-do and the industrious.

"So Hitler and his aides made the Jews the scapegoats for Germany's troubles. It makes no difference that the German Jews have for centuries been more patriotically and devoutly German than the Germans themselves. The appeal was to the ignorant masses, and the Jew had to suffer."

I may be wrong, but I imagine it will not be easy for Germany to finance its next war.

REVISION . . . revised. One of the amazing things my friend told me was that the German people are openly abandoning Christianity; not all of them, but the element which is strongest in support of the Nazi program.

"The children are being taught to believe in the old gods of Valhalla, in the ancient Teutonic myths instead of the Bible," he said. The very next day I read a dispatch from Berlin giving the text of a new version of the 87th Psalm, which has been amended by a Nazi leader so that it begins: "The Lord loveth the height of Germany more than all the dwellings abroad."

In the preface to this "revised version" it is asserted that the Biblical story of Christ must be wrong, because it represents Christ as a Jew.

I got an entirely new idea of what is happening in Germany. It is not a pleasant picture.

THRIFT . . . two ideas. The outstanding example of thrift in modern times, it seems to me, is the case of Emily Smith.

Miss Smith spent her lifetime in charge of Hampton Court Maze in London, a famous labyrinth of hedges in which a visitor can wander for hours and not find either the center or the way out. Miss Smith's fee for each visitor to the Maze was one penny—two cents. She died the other day and left an estate valued at $250,000.

Anybody can accumulate money by spending less than his intake. Few realize that it is harder to keep money than to get it.

STAMPS . . . an investment. Like thousands of other boys, I began stamp collecting when I was ten or eleven years old. I traded my collection for a rifle, and nearly fifty years later one set of uncanceled U. S. Departmental stamps which I had owned sold for $30,000!

I went the other day to an international exhibition of postage stamps. Nobody in the world, I believe, possesses an absolutely complete set of all the adhesive stamps ever printed. King George of England has the largest collection, but President Roosevelt's is also a very fine and complete one. Many stamp collections are valued at hundreds of thousands of dollars.

If I were twenty again, and had as much sense as I have acquired since that age, I would put my spare change into postage stamps, collecting judiciously, specializing in some particular class or kind of stamps, with the certainty that for every dollar invested now I could get a hundred dollars or more forty years from now.

FRANCE . . . has grafters. I find a certain patriotic satisfaction in the disclosures of official graft and corruption in France. It proves, what I have often said, that political crookedness is not solely an American trait. Some of my friends would have me believe that everything European is better than anything American. My observation is that human nature is the same all over the world, and that given the opportunity to get away with it, men who will use their political offices to feather their own nests at public expense can be found anywhere.

French politics has always been corrupt. This time it looks as if the gang which has been in power for years was through. Some of my Paris correspondents are greatly alarmed; they predict another revolution in France.

TUT . . . no curse. Superstitions are hard to kill. Humanity is credulous because most of us want to believe in something we can't explain. The story that has been going the rounds for several years about the curse laid by the Egyptian Pharaoh, Tut-Ankh-Amen, upon whomever might despoil his tomb, I have heard seriously discussed by otherwise intelligent people, who informed me gravely that every one, or nearly every one, of the members of the expedition which found the treasures in that ancient tomb a few years ago had since died a mysterious death.

A check-up by Director Winlock of the Metropolitan Museum of Art proves that out of the forty persons present when King Tut's tomb was unwrapped, thirty-three are still alive and in good health after ten years. The seven who died lived to an average of sixty.

That doesn't sound as if Tut's curse had been very effective, but I imagine foolish people will continue to repeat the original story for generations. It is more interesting than the truth.

London, Feb. 12.—Lady Nancy Astor whose recent temperance speech in the house of commons led to an angry scene told a startling tonight at Bermuda. She had made no charges of corruption against any member of the present house. Last week she withdrew a remark that the liquor trade had paid some members $10,000 a year to defend its interests.

Havana, Feb. 13.—The district attorney of Santa Clara province today asked the court to pass a sentence of 18 years imprisonment on former Senator Carlos Machado, brother of former president Gerardo Machado, on charges that he plotted the assassination of a rival cattle man, Santiago Gonzalez. Gonzalez escaped death but was gravely wounded. Machado is now in prison here.

We Have Been Asked

By some of our customers why their CROSLLEY BATTERY RADIO holds its same volume and power over a period of many months when their neighbor's radio (not a Crosley) holds its volume only a few weeks—both supposedly modern battery radios?

This question will be answered in following issues.
