PARKWAY DISPUTE IS TO BE SETTLED SOON

Washington, Aug. 10.—With Secretary Ickes expected back in Washington next week, the question of the Shenandoah-Great Smokies parkway, dormant since he left on his vacation in July, will be revived.

The route for the 400-mile scenic highway has been approved from the southernmost point of the Shenandoah national park in Virginia to Blowing Rock, N. C., but the location from that point to the Great Smoky Mountains national park in North Carolina and Tennessee is in dispute.

Senator Reynolds, of North Carolina, who is now in Washington, has an engagement to see Ickes August 16, the day after the secretary is scheduled to return here.

It is probable that Ickes will set a date for the hearing shortly after that conference.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT BACK IN WHITE HOUSE

Washington, Aug. 10.—President Roosevelt returned today to the White House, after traveling more than 14,000 miles in 40 days, with a train load of new ideas, having pointed the way, while still on the road, for a realignment of the political parties in America, and after giving to his fellow countrymen the promise that the new deal machinery would move steadily along the road, the end and direction of which is yet to be defined. The friends of the President are very certain that his trip must be regarded as a triumph and they are not at all surprised that he apparently construes this continuous reception by huge crowds, despite a man killing sun and heat, as a mandate for more action, the while bearing to the left.

Pig Eats Dynamite, Mule Kicks Pig, Explosion Occurs

Goldsboro, Aug. 10.—Walt Powell, farmer of the Pinkney section, reported in Goldsboro today that a few days ago his pig, Paddy, ate several sticks of dynamite, that a few hours later a mule kicked the pig, that the pig was blown into atoms and that the mule was killed by the explosion.

Mr. Powell said he was blasting stumps in a field, that he went for a drink of water, and on his return was horrified to find Paddy with his head in the box of dynamite eating on the last stick. With the utmost delicacy he ran the pig off the lot. The effect of the dynamite on the pig was to make him become, in his own estimation, a fierce, wild boar. He ran up behind a mule that was grazing in the pasture and nipped him on the leg.

There was a deafening roar and a flash of light. The mule spun around and dropped to the ground dead. Paddy disappeared from the face of the earth and neither hide nor hair of him has been seen since.

QUESTION AND ANSWER

Question: When should the laying flock be culled for low producing hens?

Answer: The most rigid culling should be done at the close of the laying season which usually occurs from July to November. However, the flock should be closely watched through the latter part of July and all of August. It is at this time that the non-paying hen goes into a molt and these should be culled from the flock and disposed of as soon as production ceases. Get rid of all early molters.

For the first time in his long theatrical career, W. C. Fields, Paramount film comedian, is cast as a "gay, romantic lover." It's in his new picture, "The Old-Fashioned Way," which is being screened at the Liberty Theatre, today and tomorrow.

Playing the role of "The Great McGonigle," Fields is the leader of a band of vaudeville troupers, who go from town to town struggling for fame and food, dodging sheriffs along the route.

When they arrive in Bellefontaine, the town's wealthiest widow, who has operatic aspirations, falls in love with Fields, and his troubles take on new hues, especially when she brings

The role of the widow is taken by Jan Deigan, one of the Los Angeles stars of the famous and melodramatic "The Drunkard," new gripping legend of romance both in Los Angeles and New York.
