GAME HEADS URGE MODEL LAW TO AID STATE WILDLIFE

Washington, D. C., Nov. 12.—With the objective of eliminating politics from fish and game departments and promoting the greatest efficiency of a "model law" or Organization Bill, has been approved by the International Association of Game, Fish and Conservation Commissioners, according to a bulletin of the American Game Association. This bill is to be placed before sportsmen and the general public throughout the country, according to plans of conservationists. Former Senator Harry B. Hawes, Washington, D. C., father of many federal wildlife conservation laws, is chairman of the committee of the game officials association presenting the bill.

The Bill is really three bills in one. The work is divided into three parts. One, a comprehensive long explanatory form intended for use in a State which desires in one enactment to revise its laws. Another, an abbreviated short form of organization for those states which prefer a shorter form of general enactment. And the third, supplemental suggestions for additional sections to existing game codes.

The organization bills recommended the commission plan of government, to consist of five members representing different geographical sections of a state and not more than three shall be of the same political party, and the members to be appointed by the Governor, "one to serve one year, one to serve two years, one to serve three years, one to serve four years, one to serve five years; and thereafter as such terms expire their successors shall be appointed for terms of five years."

Dunne And Boles Teamed In Edith Wharton Story

Capturing the spirit and beauty of the novel from which it was adapted, "The Age of Innocence," starring Irene Dunne and John Boles, comes to the New Orpheum Theatre Thursday and Friday. Noted as one of the classics of modern American literature, the story deals with the convention-ridden era that marked the close of the last century, and gives intimate glimpses of life as lived by members of New York's then Four Hundred. The picture is said to adhere closely to the story of Edith Wharton's book, which won the Pulitzer Prize in 1920, and which was later dramatized by Margaret Ayer Barnes as a starring vehicle for Katharine Cornell. "The Age of Innocence" centers about the romance of a freedom-loving girl for a man who strives to throw off the shackles of a narrow social code. Drawn together by kindred interests and a lifelong friendship that ripens into love, they are confronted with the alternative of sacrificing their own happiness or that of those whom they would not wound.

The film marks the first joint appearance of Miss Dunne and Boles since their memorable "Back Street," and the supporting cast includes Lionel Atwill, Helen Westley, Laura Hope Crews and Julia Hayden. Phillip Moeller, one of the founders of the New York Theatre Guild, directed this RKO-Radio Picture.

Reynolds For Bonus; Bailey With F. D. R.

Senator Robert R. Reynolds has stated his position on the soldiers bonus question as "100 per cent for payment of the bonus . . . more earnestly for it than ever before."

Senator Reynolds made this statement Saturday night at the same time Senator J. W. Bailey reiterated his stand to follow the President on the bonus question.

"I shall follow the President on the bonus question," declared Senator Bailey. "It is a financial question and the President is head of the financial program of the nation. I shall follow him on this question as I have consistently on all other financial matters." The senator readily admitted he would stand by the President and give him his enthusiastic support. During the last session Senator Bailey upon several occasions brilliantly stood by Mr. Roosevelt's views on fiscal matters and led successful debates on those questions.

Senator Reynolds, whose views were also expressed freely, declared in a statement given out in Washington that he felt confident the bonus would be passed by the next congress, "and I do not believe," he said, "that the President, when all the facts are presented, will oppose it along the lines as before. We have elected a new congress, and one that is solidly behind the President and with him on giving relief to the needy and the hungry and at the same time providing employment for the thousands as our chief aim in continuing our recovery program."

"But returning to the bonus, this is a direct obligation. The $2,200,000 that we owe the veterans should be paid. We spent seven billions last congress, and we found the money. When people ask me, Where will we find the money? I reply, Where did we find the seven billions that we spent during the last congress? And regardless of the expenditure, we are gradually getting back to a normal plane, and business is improving. Payment of the bonus would be the greatest relief measure passed, and aside from that would be meeting an obligation that we have already acquired."

Children's Home Beats Local Team

Powerful Team From Methodist Orphanage Has Locals Out-classed 34 To 0

A powerful football squad from the Methodist Children's Home at Winston-Salem over-rode the Mountain Lions of this city in a football game here Friday afternoon 34 to 0, maintaining their perfect record of shut-outs so far this season.

The visitors were a powerful, seasoned and fleet team who went plunging and racing far substantial gains on almost every down and not once did the locals threaten to score, although the second string was in the game for Children's Home for a full quarter.

Coach Bill Murray, Duke star halfback of three years ago, seemed to have trained his subjects to perfection and very few plays failed to gain several yards. They stuck to ground plays and only twice, in making extra points, did they pass the pigskin.

North Wilkesboro played valiantly and gamely but against unreasonable odds in a heavier and tougher team of experienced young men who played with the utmost of confidence.

In the latter period North Wilkesboro took to the air with attempted long passes but the second string visitors were always there to knock them down.

The next game of the Mountain Lions will be a night game against Morganton there on Friday night.
