Seven Dry Agents Added In State

C. S. Felts and J. R. Brandon Are Two of Additional Men For State

T. E. Patton, of Charlotte, head of the North Carolina alcohol tax unit, announced Tuesday that seven men are being added to the department in North Carolina.

Charles S. Felts, of Hays, and Joseph R. Brandon, of Elkin, were the first two to be added on the additional force. They are former prohibition agents.

The others are: Arthur R.
Williams, of Greensboro; Daniel L. McShane, of Charlotte; W. D.
Smith, of Red Springs; Moses R.
Harshaw, of Lenoir, and Edwin C. Gregory, Jr., of Salisbury.

The principal duties of the investigators is in prohibiting the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquor. However, the new rulings are to the effect that the federal agents may cooperate in curbing liquor traffic of any kind in states where it is prohibited.

Need For More And Better Work Animals

Horses and mules are not listed among North Carolina's surplus commodities, says C. D.
Grinnells, associate professor of animal husbandry at State College.

In fact, he says, the shortage in work stock, felt for years, reached significant proportions during the depression and is still one of the State's agricultural problems.

Grinnells says it would take at least four years to appreciably remedy the shortage, but a program started now would, in a few years, place North Carolina in a good position insofar as work stock is concerned.

Prices of good, sound animals will continue high, he says, and owners of good stock will find it well worth while to breed and raise high grade animals.

Meanwhile, he urges farmers to take care of the stock they have. Too many farmers have drifted into the custom of letting their horses and mules shift for themselves. The rations are limited and the quality of the feed, especially during the off season, is usually bad, indigestible, damaged, or mouldy.

If all the fishermen in the world were placed side by side—wow—what a bunch of liars!

for you to bring me a book satchel, a pencil box, some candy and some nuts. I want you to bring me some big rosy apples.
My little brother wants a wagon

"The Gay Divorcee" Called Screen's First
True Musical Comedy

"The Gay Divorcee," RKO-Radio's current musical comedy hit is declared to be the first "true musical comedy" ever presented on the screen.

Studio officials, it is said, exhausted every possibility to accurately capture the giddy, headlong speed of the plot, which, as a stage play starring Fred Astaire, played 238 performances in New York and six months in the Palace Theatre, London.

Astaire and Ginger Rogers are starred, with such famous screen players as Alice Brady and Edward Everett Horton featured.

Hit numbers of the original play have been retained, including the celebrated "Night and Day" number, to the music of which Astaire does his famous "Dance of Moods." There is also Astaire's sensational wild dance of joy and abandonment, wherein, having at last won the lady of his dreams, he celebrates by leading her in a daring waltz over tables, chairs, davenport and what-nots.

The play itself is one of Broadway's historic incidents. Written by Dwight Taylor, lyrics and music by Cole Porter, the opus was first classed as a dud. Under that opprobrium it kicked around Broadway alleys for a long time, shunned by all.

Several times it was owned by rather desperate producers caught with a play and none to produce. When they found something they thought was better, they passed the play along at a bargain rate. Eventually it made fortunes for everyone connected with it.

"The Gay Divorcee" is the attraction at the New Orpheum Theatre next Tuesday and Wednesday.

New Decorative Ideas In
"One Exciting Adventure"

Interior decorators have taken up the use of transparencies in homes where space permits additional windows of glazed or "camphor" glass. Since the art directors of motion pictures are always two or more leaps ahead of stylists in fashions of any sort, it is but natural that the introduction of such decoration should come through the medium of the screen.

Stanley Fleisher, art director for "One Exciting Adventure," Binnie Barnes' new Universal starring picture which is receiving its initial showing at the Orpheum Theatre on Monday is one of the first to anticipate the new decorative idea. He has introduced it in a novel and extremely beautiful manner in the tea room of the Hotel Atlantic in Paris where an important part of the drama is laid.

Semi-circular glazed glass windows have exquisite Japanese scenes silhouetted on them in black transparencies and with the sunlight streaming through them, are very striking. No other decoration is used in the room.

JOE E. BROWN WANTS
"SPILL" REPEATED

When he's working on a picture, Joe E. Brown constantly carries a portable motion picture camera with him for unusual shots. During the making of his First National comedy, "6 Day Bike Rider," showing at the New Orpheum Theatre Friday, he took more footage than he generally does because of the thrilling race scenes.

At one point in the race, the speeding riders took a rough spill with Joe's camera trained on them. As the professionals were lifting themselves from the hard track, Joe shouted: "Come on, boys, my film buckled, let's take another spill."

The riders were ready to gang him until they spotted the twinkle in his eye.

Son: "Papa, when you went to school, did they have a board of education?"

Father: "No, son. The teacher used a willow switch."
