

Cabinet Tells New Deal Success as Roosevelt Rule Enters Third Year

Washington, March 4.—Silent to himself, but with every member of his cabinet praising results of the new deal, President Roosevelt today looked into a third White House year that holds questions of great moment to his political future.

The overcast skies and the chill in the air were strangely reminiscent of that day two years ago when the President stood on the steps of the capitol to respond as Chief Justice Hughes administered the oath.

Instead of preparing to meet a banking debacle and threatened economic collapse, however, today found Mr. Roosevelt sending a merchant marine subsidy message to Congress and endeavoring to straighten out a congressional tangle over his four billion dollar relief program—a tangle which political wisecracks predicted would cast its curious twisting shadows upon 1936 and its presidential election.

Congress was rebellious on other matters too and the soothsayers also forecast that his skill in handling divergent elements also would reflect itself in the nation's history.

Not until night fall did he observe the anniversary itself. A dinner to which members of his cabinet and several close friends were invited had been arranged for the evening it was given in the Mayflower hotel which housed the presidential family two years ago before it moved to the White House.

But before that all members of his cabinet outlined the achievements of their departments during the two years.

Discuss Wreck Bill

Elkin, March 5.—The Surry county board of commissioners, assembled in regular session yesterday at Dobson, faced again the problem of the hospital expense of the 33 school pupils of the county who were severely injured in a wreck of a county school bus some weeks ago. Parents of the injured pupils appeared before the board in a body to discuss the problem, aware that neither the county nor the state was obligated to assume the hospital bill.

No definite disposition of the matter was made but suggestion was made that the hospital authorities be requested to reduce the charge for attention, to a non-profit level. The county board, after receiving the answer, will further consider the matter.

All of the injured pupils are now out of the hospital, although several of those most seriously injured have not fully recovered.

Study of Warren's Potato Control Bill Starts Soon

Washington, March 4.—A house agriculture subcommittee will begin its study of the Warren potato control bill Wednesday.

The committee is headed by Representative Carden, of Kentucky, but Representative Kleberg, of Texas, will preside when the potato measure is first considered. Carden is away from the capital.

Under the proposal, which was introduced by Representative Warren, of North Carolina, potatoes would become a basic commodity and a tax levied to reduce commercial production.

THE MIGHTY BARNUM COMING THURSDAY-FRIDAY

Virginia Bruce, Adolphe Menjou and Wallace Beery in "The Mighty Barnum"

P. T. Barnum, self-styled "Prince of Humbugs," comes back to a hearty life Thursday and Friday at the Liberty Theatre, in the person of Wallace Beery, who plays the matchless showman in Darryl F. Zanuck's production of "The Mighty Barnum," for 20th Century Pictures.

The screen play, which maintains the comedy mood best suited not alone to Barnum's extravagant exploits, but to Beery's most popular type of characterization as well, was written by Gene Fowler, famous biographer, and Bess Meredith, one of Hollywood's ablest scenarists.

The story opens with Barnum's entrance into the sideshow business exactly a hundred years ago when, having acquired a few reptile monstrosities and an aged negress named Jolce Heth, purported to be 160 years old and erstwhile nurse of the infant George Bowery grocery, rented a livery stable and opened Barnum's American Museum.

The famous midget, General Tom Thumb and his bride Lavinia, the Cardiff Giant, the Bearded Lady, the Fiji Mermaid, the Woolly Horse and all the rest of the "natural oddities" with which Barnum staggered New York a century ago are also seen. His splurge from the grotesque to the sublime with the sponsoring of the American debut of Jenny Lind, the lovely Swedish nightingale, at Castle Garden, plays a big part in the picture, with Virginia Bruce charmingly interpreting the golden-voiced Jenny.

Adolphe Menjou, Rochelle Hudson and Janet Beecher are also importantly cast in this Joseph M. Schenck presentation which Walter Lang directed for release through United Artists.

CONSTIPATION Can be Helped! (Use what Doctors do)

Why do the bowels usually move regularly and thoroughly, long after a physician has given you treatment for constipation?

Because the doctor gives a liquid laxative that can always be taken in the right amount. You can gradually reduce the dose. Reduced dosage is the secret of real and safe relief from constipation.

Ask your doctor about this. Ask your druggist how popular liquid laxatives have become. The right liquid laxative gives the right kind of help, and the right amount of help. When the dose is repeated, instead of more each time, you take less. Until the bowels are moving regularly and thoroughly without any help at all. The liquid laxative generally used is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It contains senna and cascara, and these are natural laxatives that form no habit—even in children. Your druggist has it; ask for—

THIS WEEK IN WASHINGTON

"HUEY LONG"

Washington, March 4. (Auto-caster)—Ask anybody in Washington who is the outstanding figure here today and more than half will reply: "Huey Long."

The Senator from Louisiana fills the public and political eye almost as completely as President Roosevelt did two years ago. For Senator Long is responsible for the first important defeat the President has experienced since he took office.

That was on the President's "work relief" bill, carrying $4,880,000,000 to be spent as the President pleases. The issue was the proposed amendment to direct that the prevailing rate of wages must be paid on all public works under this appropriation, although the President had stated that to do that would utterly destroy the whole project. Huey Long led and directed the fight in the Senate which resulted in the adoption of the amendment by a majority of one vote.

That, for the moment at least, puts Huey Long in top position in the political eye. To be sure, he had powerful weapons to play with in his fight against the bill. The most powerful was the organized labor lobby, which is bitterly opposed to the President's play to employ men at "subsistence wages" on public works, instead of the "prevailing rate." Another was the honest feeling of a good many Democrats that it was not wise to put the practically unlimited power which this bill carries into the hands of one man, who had not even told Congress where, when and how he proposed to spend the money.

Discuss Compromise Measure. Senator Byrnes of South Carolina, who is supposed to be in the confidence of the President, said after the vote that the whole plan to substitute work relief for the dole is dead. That does not necessarily follow. The outlook is that the Senate will reconsider its action, but at the same time, as this is written, all sorts of compromise measures are being discussed. The important fact is that the President's word is no longer unquestioned law on Capitol Hill, and that Huey Long has proved himself a master of political strategy, perhaps as skillful as the President himself, who has heretofore been regarded by experienced political observers in Washington as the most able political manipulator seen here in a generation or more.

The necessity of "doing something" to curb Senator Long is becoming a fixed idea in Administration circles. The belief is growing that he can either head a third party next year, or dictate the Democratic party nomination—who would not be Mr. Roosevelt, if Huey had his way. He privately calls the President names, publicly opposes his policies, and is now waging a bitter war on Postmaster General Farley. At the Executive end of Pennsylvania Avenue Senator Long, who was first looked on only as a joke, then for a while only as a nuisance, is now being regarded as a menace.

The Pension Mess

The Old Age Pension project seems certain to be divorced from the unemployment insurance plan. The bill as submitted to Congress was a mess of unrelated items, but what Southern members are pointing to as the worst feature of the Old Age scheme is that it would pauperize the Southern Negroes. It can't be drawn, under the Constitution, to apply to white folks alone.

It is said by some Southern members that if every negro over 65 got as much as $30 a month old age pension, his children and grandchildren would quit their jobs and come to live with the old folks, and there wouldn't be any labor left for the cotton fields. That may be an exaggeration, and probably is, but it may result in killing the Old Age pension scheme in a Congress in which Southern members dominate.

Only one major bill has been enacted by this Congress after nearly two months. That is the one enlarging the powers of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. All other major legislation seems to be dammed up behind the work relief bill, with the bitterness of organized labor against the Administration growing more apparent every day. The proposal to extend NRA for two years, made by the President, will not get consideration for another two or three months, in all likelihood.

Mid-Term Feelings

Even the President's friends are a bit concerned over the ineptness of some of the men upon whom he relies for political maneuvering. Too many have undertaken to speak for the President, with the result that several Senators who have been regarded as his friends consider that they have either been insulted or slighted.

Many members of both Houses are complaining that they have not been getting their share of patronage. No previous Administration ever worked as hard and as fast to get members of the opposition party out of their jobs and fill all the places with its own political supporters, but the Postmaster General, in his capacity as Chairman of the Democratic National Committee, is charged with paying more attention to the recommendations of the party leaders back in the States than to the Senators and Representatives in Congress.

What is happening in Washington is what usually happens in the middle of any President's first term. Friction of all sorts develops—but usually it is smoothed out, as most of the present friction will be. Mr. Roosevelt is said, by his friends, to be getting a bit "touchy" and inclined to resent well-meant suggestions. He is just beginning to find out, what all Presidents learn, that nobody ever tells any President the whole truth about anything.
