A year ago we thought we had recognized Russia. Now all we can say is it must have been two other fellows.—Rochester Democrat and Chronicle.

Ancient rulers must have been great guys. They ranked as gods without a censored press to put over the idea.—Wisconsin State Journal.

The Go To Church Movement

As a family journal, this newspaper has no inclination to go into a discussion of religion, particularly from a denominational standpoint, but we do not consider it amiss to discuss "The Church as a Community Asset."

This subject becomes more interesting, due to the fact that an interdenominational movement has been started here for the purpose of increasing church attendance.

This leads to the desire to touch upon the subject of the value of the church in a town or community. A person who is considering moving into a community will ask first about two institutions—the church and the school. Regardless of one's religious beliefs or regardless of whether or not one is a church member, he wants to make his home in a community where there are active churches because he knows that a community with good churches will be suitable for residence.

In view of the immeasurable value of churches it is the civic duty of everybody to support the churches and one of the best ways to support a church is to lend your interest and influence by attending the services regularly.

The Journal-Patriot is behind the "Go-to-Church" movement and will co-operate fully with the plan of impressing upon people the idea that they should attend church services, not only asking the residents of North Wilkesboro but all its readers to attend the church of their choice.

Invention and Demand

There has been a great deal of discussion lately over what the folk who coin new phrases call the "time lag" between invention or discovery and the general use of the new things invented or discovered. Somebody invented a typewriter in 1784, it is pointed out, but the first typewriter actually put on the market was in 1874, ninety years later. Blaise Pascal made an adding machine in 1665, but adding machines were not marketed commercially until about fifty years or so ago. Men were experimenting with power-driven vehicles, and actually ran steam-engined automobiles in England more than 100 years ago, yet the automobile did not become an article of commerce until within the past forty years.

The impression some folks get is that something is wrong with a social system that lets great inventions lie dormant for a century or two. What is really worse, it seems to us, is that these same people think that all that is necessary is to invent something which a future generation will find useful.

The typewriter was put on the market when it was because the time was ripe for it. There was little demand for such a machine until business had developed to the point in volume where it would be useful as a time-saver. So, too, with the counting machine. As for the automobile, its commercial application had to wait for the invention of the gasoline engine, the discovery of petroleum and means of extracting the gasoline, a great supply of low-priced rubber, and the growth of population and wealth which would make it possible for large numbers of people to buy cars.

In the research laboratories of today there are hundreds, probably thousands of inventions and discoveries which will remain unused until the time comes when it will be profitable to commercialize them, and that time will be when society is ready to buy them, and not before.

Commencement—Then What?

Commencement time is almost here for the schools of Wilkes county and graduates will soon be facing the question of what to do.

It is a conceded fact that high school graduates in this age do not have the experience and training to fit them for a grapple with the problems of life. There is nothing wrong with high school education and training, but in most cases the graduates are in the teen ages and have not yet tasted of the bitterness of disappointment and have not experienced the feeling of success. In other words, they are not fitted by age or experience for life and the universal advice is to go to college or continue education in some chosen channel.

However, practically all of us have been along that road of high school graduation and know what a pleasant feeling it is to receive a diploma and know that we have passed in a manner satisfactory to teachers four years of high school work. Possibly some will presume that they have done something worthy of great note and that, having received a diploma, a comfortable living will be forthcoming without more effort.

The primary aim of education, whether you know it or not, is to fit you for work and not to place you in a position where you will not have to work. No one has yet received a comfortable living or wealth on a silver platter just because he or she happens to possess a diploma. The diploma is to certify that you have received a certain degree of academic training that should be of benefit later on. It does not mean that you have already accomplished something; it means that you have acquired the training that should enable you to do something when you face life in the raw.

Whether you go on to institutions of higher education or start to work, you will find that you must put your education into practical use and work harder than the other fellow to gain and retain the lead in any kind of endeavor.

TEN FAMOUS WOMEN

The same letter which invited ten thousand preachers to name the ten greatest men in the Bible asked also for a list of ten famous women. Seventy-four names received votes, and are arranged not in the order of their popularity but in their chronological sequence:

1. Eve, "the mother of all living."
2. Ruth (who had the highest vote next to Mary, the mother of Jesus).
3. Hannah, the devoted mother.
4. The one woman whom the Bible calls great.
5. Esther, the beautiful queen.
6. Mary, the mother of Jesus (for whom practically every vote was cast).
7. Mary of Magdala.
8. The Bethany Sisters.
9. The woman of Samaria.
10. The widow who gave the mite.

Eve: Every ancient people has its own legend of the creation of the first man and woman, and in almost every story the woman gets the worst of it. It is only fair to Eve to remember this. Some man (Moses or another) is her biographer.

When the woman saw that the tree was good for food, and that it was pleasant to the eyes, and a tree to be desired to make one wise, she took of the fruit thereof, and did eat, and gave also to her husband.

So much for the Eve whom everybody knows, the Eve of the Garden and the transgression. We shall not linger with her. It is with Eve the girl with an unhappy memory and the swift disillusionment going forth with the young man she loved and making a home "east of Eden," whom we should like to know better.

There in the backwoods is heard the lullaby of this primitive Madonna, singing the song that all mothers have sung:

"I have gotten a man From the Lord."

She knows very well that the child is Adam's son, this child, this miracle of little pink toes and tiny hands that have such a terrible clutch at one's hair and heartstrings.

That is the theme of all cradle songs. Eve set the mothers of the world to singing. She did wrong, in that apple affair. But as a result of it she and Adam were no longer prisoners; they were working to pay off the mortgage. And weren't they happier, isn't the whole race happier, in this bustling and chaotic world than if they had stayed in Eden?

I sometimes wonder how much Eve really regretted!

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE— WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and weak and the world looks pink, don't swallow a lot of salts, mints and water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.
For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.
If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, and you break out in blotches. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.
It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get those two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.
Don't bank on liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Remotest substitute. 25-cent drug stores. © 1931 C. M. Co.
