WASHINGTON SEES 1936 ISSUES CRYSTALLIZING

Washington, June 16. (Auto-caster)—Whatever the outcome of the efforts of Congress and the Administration to salvage what is left of the New Deal, in the light of the Supreme Court's decisions, one thing seems clear to most of the political observers here. That is that the issue upon which the Presidential campaign of 1936 will be fought out has been sharply and clearly defined. The issue will be whether the United States Government is to be further centralized in Washington, or whether the existing system of 48 independent states is to be continued and strengthened.

The Supreme Court made it clear that under the Constitution as it stands there can be no such centralization of power as Mr. Roosevelt and his advisors, and his supporters in Congress, attempted to exercise. And while the Administration is trying to make up its mind whether the people of the United States are ready to amend the Constitution, the boys on Capitol Hill are doing more real hard work than at any time since the present Congress met in January. They have a real job in hand.

Not only are they trying to work out a substitute for the National Industrial Recovery Act which will meet the Constitutional objections pointed out by the Supreme Court, but they are reconsidering the amendments to the Agricultural Administration Act, and looking over again the new Banking Bill, the Wagner Labor Relations Bill, the Social Security Bill, the Guffey Coal Regulation Bill and the amendments to the Tennessee Valley Authority Act, to see whether those can be re-shaped to get around the Court's ruling, or whether some or all of them will have to be thrown in the discard.

Hard Summer Ahead
It is not only pretty tough on the Senators and Representatives to have to do so much work over again which they had pretty nearly finished, but the hot season in Washington is decidedly uncomfortable, and it now looks as if the boys would not be able to get away before August at the earliest.

Literally, there has never been such a state of confusion in Washington within the memory of anyone who is now active in public affairs. On the one hand is the firm belief of the dominant majority in Congress, and of the Administration, that centralized control of business and industry is absolutely essential to the salvation of the economic life of the nation. On the other hand there is profound uncertainty as to whether this point of

Yankee Hurler Sensation In Baseball News

New York—Young Vito Tamulis (above) is the Yankee rookie pitcher who is now a sensation in the American League. In his five first games he won them all, three shut-outs with 18 consecutive scoreless innings to his credit. He is 24 years old, has courage, control and a good curve.

view is held by enough voters to back up any efforts that may be made to make that belief effective.

Some Election Is
An extremely interesting analysis of the votes in the Congressional elections last Fall is giving a good many Congressmen something to worry about. There were 32,804,100 ballots cast at that election. If only 1.2 per cent of those votes had been cast on the other side, in the right districts, a Republican majority instead of a Democratic majority would have been elected. There were one hundred and eleven closely contested districts, and a shift of one vote out of every 86 in each of those districts would have made the present Congress Republican instead of Democratic.

The boys from those 111 districts, which might have gone the other way, are wondering now how far their voters will follow them in any scheme to revive NRA or to change the Constitution of the United States. They have already heard from home that, in the opinion of great masses of voters, the NRA was already as dead as the final knockout blow. What is worrying them is how far it will be safe for their own political futures to go along in any kind of effort to revive the codes.

Searching for Control
Among the interesting suggestions that have been revived as a result of the Supreme Court decision is the old idea of a federal incorporation law, which would require all businesses engaged in inter-state commerce to take out federal charters. This it is believed, would give the federal government an effective and constitutional means of control of such enterprises. Under the federal taxing power, it is pointed out, another means of control might be operative.

Those are just a few of the numerous ideas which are being discussed, none of which has crystallized. In the meantime, the "pressure blocs"—chiefly those of organized labor, organized farmers and organized veterans—are demanding that something be done right away in their interests. Some of the statistical sharks on Capitol Hill have it figured out that the total of the "pressure blocs" represents about 17 per cent of the voters of the United States. The other 83 per cent have little influence on legislation, because they are unorganized. But they are beginning to be taken a little more seriously than has been the case heretofore.

More Coalition Talk
Getting back to politics, which Washington always gets back to, the suggestion of a coalition party to oppose Mr. Roosevelt next year is being taken with increasing seriousness. How many Democrats there are who are ready to split off from their party because they do not like his leadership nobody knows, but there are a good many in Congress and undoubtedly many more outside of Congress. One hears the name of Lewis W. Douglas, former Director of the Budget, spoken with great respect whenever the talk turns on coalition party lines. There is also a good deal of talk about Justice Owen J. Roberts of the Supreme Court as good Republican presidential timber. All gossip of this sort, however, while interesting, means nothing in the light of the complete chaos into which everything in Washington has been thrown by the Supreme Court's ruling.

Roosevelt Signs NRA Extension Resolution

Washington, June 16.—President Roosevelt signed the NRA resolution tonight, ending the bitter argument that has raged for weeks, and extending the agency until April 1, 1936.

The President scratched his name at the bottom of the resolution after the House, earlier in the day, had concurred with Senate amendments that action by the House was the final move in Congress.

Mr. Roosevelt appeared anxious to sign the measure. At his press conference he told newspapermen that he was not going to wait four minutes after the conference was over to put his signature on the resolution.

By the action NRA, crippled by the Supreme Court's decision in the Schechter poultry case, escaped death by one day.

If Congress had not finished with the NRA resolution before midnight tomorrow, the recovery agency would have expired because Congress' original grant of authority extended only until June 16, 1935.

Tonight NRA is a different organization entirely from the one it was a year ago when the blue eagle was in thousands of shop windows and the first administrator of the agency—Gen. Hugh S. Johnson—was swinging across the country preaching the gospel of government regulation.

This is what NRA is now:

- 1. A skeleton organization, employing only about 1,500 persons instead of 5,400.
- 2. An agency that has no power to enforce a code. It can, however, receive voluntary codes from business men, including agreements on wages, hours, working conditions and fair trade practices.

The anti-trust laws, suspended by the recovery act, are back in force tonight. Only in event business men agree to form voluntary codes can the anti-trust laws be waived under the new NRA.

McDONALD IS TALKED FOR GOVERNOR'S RACE

Raleigh, June 14.—Political guessers who come to Raleigh affect to know that Representative Ph. D. of the late legislature is going to stay in North Carolina and run for governor.

The paper boys print that opinion occasionally but admit that they give it to the public as other guesses have "gun it" to them. Dr. McDonald never has been heard to say anything on the subject one way or another. In good humor he has more than once been quoted as saying that if he had $15,000 he might be willing to try his hand at running. He declared to run for mayor of Winston-Salem this spring, but he was in the legislature and had no time to attend to his campaign. Nor could he quit the house.

He has taught at Duke university and in Salem college. If he should run for governor he would be known as one of the very handsomest candidates ever beheld by his constituents. But two sets of people are very anxious for him to get into the fight. The violent anti-sales taxers who wish to punish the Ehringhaus administration are anxious to get the best informed man in the race on that ticket. It is agreed that the Forsyth man fills the bill.

HOUSE MEMBERS WANT PATRONAGE

Washington, June 12.—There is a growing resentment in the North Carolina House of Representatives delegation over the fact that they are being ignored to a large extent in patronage matters.

Some of the members are openly expressing the opinion that the senators are getting all the patronage and they are being consulted only after persons have been selected.

As a result of this dissatisfaction, Representative Doughton, dean of the delegation, will soon be asked to call the Tar Heel House members into conference and the whole question of patronage will be discussed.

Charles West, former Ohio member of Congress and White House contact man with Capitol Hill, may be asked to sit in on the pow-pow.

Wilmington Officials Indicted By Grand Jury

Wilmington, June 13.—An attempt to "purge" the Wilmington city administration appeared imminent tonight as a New Hanover county grand jury returned indictments against the mayor, chief of police and a city policeman.

Charges against the three involved acceptance of bribes, transporting and selling liquor and corruption in connection with municipal elections.

Mayor W. H. Blair was in New York today. He is expected to return here tomorrow. The two police officers named in the indictments were Chief J. C. Lane and C. D. Hare.

Two Others Indicted
Two other persons indicted were M. L. Starkey, a business man, and Fred Allen.

Blair was charged with promising city jobs to two men while he was a candidate for the office of mayor in 1933; taking city-owned gasoline for his private use, and receiving and transporting liquor.

Joint charges against Blair and Lane accused them of failing to confiscate liquor stored at police headquarters; of illegally transporting liquor from police headquarters to Lane's garage and of buying votes with liquor during the 1933 city elections.

Six separate indictments charged Hare with failing to arrest bootleggers in return for bribes of liquor and money.

HOLC Extended For Short Time

Salisbury, June 13.—The extension of home owners in districts who desire aid of the Home Owners Loan Corporation, was today called to the fact that under the amendment of the HOLC Act, recently passed by Congress, the period for filing new applications will expire at midnight, June 27th, 1935. After that date, it was stated by T. C. Abernethy, State Manager of the Corporation here, no applications will be received from home owners who are in distress and who are eligible under the law for assistance, and he urged that all those desiring assistance file their applications at once.

Mr. Abernethy stated that regulations, as to eligibility, remain virtually unchanged, and those desiring complete explanation of what cases are eligible may receive it either by calling at the State Office, Post Office Building, Salisbury, N. C., or one of the District Offices, or by writing for full information. Office hours of the Corporation, for the summer, became effective two weeks ago, and are from 8:30 a. m. to 4:30 p. m. Mr. Abernethy stated that these hours have been changed, for the convenience of the public, and application clerks will be on hand in the State and District Offices until 5:30 and later every afternoon until the time limit for filing applications expires.

District Offices are located as follows: Raleigh, Charlotte, Greensboro, Asheville and Greenville.

Under Chiropractic Adjustments Mastoiditis and High Blood Pressure Are Annihilated.

Ronda, N. C.
Jan. 15, 1935.

For a number of years I have been very nervous and suffered very much with a severe headache. My husband is a medical practitioner and could give me only temporary relief. He called in other doctors and they diagnosed my case as Mastoiditis and High Blood Pressure. They found my blood pressure was 195, and they only gave me temporary relief.

MRS. H. M. BROOKS
Ronda, N. C.

I saw an advertisement in the paper of Dr. E. S. Cooper, Chiropractor, and my husband advised me to try him. So I called at his office and after a thorough examination, Dr. Cooper said he thought he could remove the cause of my trouble. After a course of adjustments my blood pressure is normal and my nervousness and headache have vanished and I now enjoy good health.

I will be glad to answer any questions that may be asked me.

This is to state that I wish to support the above testimony of my wife as to her recovery while under the care of Dr. Cooper. When I was attending lectures in Chicago, I learned Chiropractic to be a valuable science. From now on when I have a patient that fails to yield to medicine as I think it should I am going to advise them to see Dr. Cooper or some other Chiropractor.
