Cork-Back Shingles

Combines Insulation, Weather-Protection

WM4 insulates everywhere. It has been manifested in a product developed by the Philip Carey Company, Cincinnati, Ohio. It is the Carey Cork Insulated Shingle, which not only incorporates all the most approved features of roofing material, but also has the additional advantage of insulating the home it covers against extremes in temperature. Millions of dollars have been spent in recent years in educating people as to the advantages of complete house-insulation, and for that reason the new Carey Shingle has attracted an unusual amount of attention. However, insulation has invariably involved the purchase of special insulating material and the expense of placing it. Consequently, this new Carey Cork Insulated Shingle promises to effect substantial savings wherever the builder's budget does not provide for the use of separate insulation. The manufacturer points out that its new product provides insulation against heat or cold, and since authorities state that a large percentage of heat leakage of a house passes through the roof, it may be assumed that the insulation feature of the new Carey Shingle will save considerable fuel and also provide a warmer home in winter. Similarly, in summer, it keeps the interior cool and comfortable. The construction of the new shingle with separate layers of cork, saturated felt, slate and waterproof asphaltic cement, combined under heavy pressure, makes it fire retardant as well as weathertight. Handsome color effects are available in the new shingle. This shingle being made extra thick produces deeper shadow lines making a strikingly attractive finished roof.
