Threat of Third Party Gone With Long Death, Say Republican Chiefs

Washington, Sept. 10.—Out of the endeavor to measure political effects of the death of Senator Huey P. Long came the view from Republicans today that the sharpest thorn to plague the Democratic administration was gone.

It was expressed in the quiet of their offices by persons who refused to be quoted. They put the same thought again in different words and said they hated to see this "Democratic dissolving influence" removed.

Democrats talked less about his death, other than to voice expressions of deep regret. Politics did not appear in their statements, but there was general agreement that the outstanding threat of a third party movement had disappeared from the path of the oncoming presidential campaign.

Rev. D. A. Adams will preach Saturday afternoon, three o'clock, at Bethel church and on Sunday evening, 7:30 o'clock at Mountain View church at Hays. The public is invited to attend both services.
