

Billy Sunday Is Fatally Stricken

Internationally Known Evangelist Passes at Home of Relative in Chicago

Chicago, Nov. 6.—The Rev. William A. (Billy) Sunday, 72, well-known evangelist, died suddenly tonight of angina pectoris at the home of a brother-in-law here.

Sunday, who came here several days ago from Winona Lake, Ind., died with his wife and Mr. and Mrs. William J. Thompson, his brother-in-law and sister. He went upstairs shortly before 8 p. m., after complaining of illness and died before a physician arrived.

His moans after he had gone upstairs, attracted members of the household who summoned medical aid immediately. The noted evangelist had been an invalid for some time.

He had suffered a mild attack about 2 p. m. today.

Sunday was born in Ames, Ia., November 19, 1863. He was graduated from a high school in Nevada, Iowa, studied at Northwestern university in suburban Evanston, Ill.

His first career was in professional baseball when he played with teams representing Chicago, Pittsburgh and Philadelphia in the National league between 1883 and 1890. Baseball fans knew him as a topnotch outfielder, and as a better than average hitter, but in 1891, while still capable of top-flight baseball, he retired to begin his ecclesiastical work.

In that year he became an assistant secretary of the Y. M. C. A. in Chicago, continuing until 1896 when he began in earnest his vigorous revivals that sent his fame across the nation and into Europe. The Chicago Presbyterian ordained him a Presbyterian minister in 1903, but he went on with his own peculiar services.

The WPA announced that the list of projects approved will be made available within a few days.

THREE TOTS SAVED BY FOUR-YEAR-OLDS

Lafayette, Tenn., Nov. 6.—Two babies and an invalid child owed their lives today to a pair of 4-year-old boys who dared smoke and flames to save them.

The story of the rescue from a burning house yesterday was told by Calvin Gregory, a neighbor. The house, a former mill building in which three families lived, was destroyed by the fire.

Gregory said that Billy Harper and Theo Justice, the two boys, were at play near their home when the blaze started from a defective flue.

In the section of the house occupied by one family were Bobbie Harper, 2, a helpless invalid, and Dixie Harper, his 9-months-old sister. Little Bobbie was asleep.

In an adjoining section slept Wilma Justice, also 9 months old. Their mothers were away when the fire broke out.

"Billy ran into the room," Gregory said. "He picked up his little sister. Her face was hot and red from the fire—just ready to blister. He carried her into the yard. Then he went back and got Bobbie out of the bed where she was asleep."

Meanwhile, Theo ran into his home and brought out his baby sister. He put her down in the yard and dashed into the house again—this time to return with a battered toy dog.

Then the two boys ran down the road calling for help.

REPORT IS MADE ON N. C. SURVEY

Washington, Nov. 3.—Farming methods in North Carolina must be reformed and industrial development encouraged if the general standard of living is to be raised, according to the preliminary findings of the North Carolina State Planning board embodied in a report to the National Resources committee and released today. The report is part of a broad survey of State Planning by the committee to be completed and made public shortly.

The North Carolina board is one of 46 State planning organizations formed in the short space of two years, according to the committee. The placing of 32 of these boards on a permanent basis by State legislatures is cited by the committee as additional evidence of the rapid growth of planning for better conservation and use of State resources.

While the North Carolina board has had little time in which to work out its program—it was given legislative sanction on May 11, last—it begins with the assurance of the co-operation of the University of North Carolina and has for its early guidance the experiences of many local bodies that have been engaged in village planning.

Land utilization surveys that have been made under the direction of the board have revealed that a large part of the agricultural area is low in productivity and that much of the land is submarginal. This condition gives rise to many problems the board is now studying. Soil erosion has seriously impaired the value of much of the land, not only in the mountainous and hilly regions but in the coastal plain. Swamps, including a part of the Dismal swamp, in the vicinity of Albemarle sound, are being studied with a view to reclamation by drainage and reforestation.

It is believed that a marked betterment in the social and economic welfare of the residents of a great part of the State, particularly in the middle and western regions, can be brought about by the development of water power resources.

Joe F. Haynes Passes

Elkin, Nov. 6.—Joe Frank Haynes, four-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Harlie Haynes, died this morning at the home near Jonesville from pneumonia.

The funeral service will be conducted Thursday morning at 11 o'clock from Swan Creek Baptist church, four miles southwest of Elkin, by the Rev. Ford Walker and the Rev. N. T. Jarvis, pastor of the church. Interment will be in the church cemetery.

Surviving are the parents and one sister, Virginia Lee Haynes, two years of age.

This Week In Washington

Washington, November 4. (Associated Press)—The President is back from his holiday, and the wheels of politics are busily turning. Interest focuses now mainly on the coming session of Congress which will begin January 3. It will be the same old Congress, but there is a decided belief here that it will be a much more critical Congress, now that the boys have had a chance to talk things over with the folks back home.

Washington news for the next six months will be the story of a bitter struggle for political advantage, not only on the part of the Administration as against the Opposition party, but on the part of individual Senators and Representatives striving to insure their own chances for reelection.

There will be plenty of controversial matter for the new Congress to consider. One of the first things it is expected to do is to pass the soldiers' bonus, but without either the Patman green-back provision, or any new tax plan to provide revenue. The principle of the Vinson bill for a long-term bond issue to raise cash for the veterans is now generally accepted, although it is expected that the opportunity may be seized by some of the "soak the rich" advocates to press again for the imposition of heavy Federal inheritance taxes.

Social Security Again?

There are many straws indicating a lively controversy over old-age pensions, going far beyond the present Social Security Act. Washington is only just beginning to realize the voting strength behind the so-called Townsend Plan, which is organizing local units all over the United States and will be in a position to put heavy pressure upon Congress. There is little chance that any universal scheme of old-age pensions will be adopted, but the subject will certainly get an airing.

The forces back of the thirty-hour-week plan have derived new strength from the action of the Federation of Labor Convention, which advocated a Constitutional amendment giving the Federal Government complete power to regulate all industry and to fix hours and wages. It is not impossible that such an amendment, backed by the growing strength of organized labor, may be submitted to the states by Congress before the next session adjourns.

Discussion of this will re-open the old question of the NRA. It is certain that strong efforts will be made to put through some modification of NRA. Washington cannot think of NRA without being reminded of General Hugh Johnson, its aggressive former head, and General Johnson has turned into the most caustic of all critics of the New Deal. He has lately been openly expressing himself.

One of the favorite amusements in Washington these days is to compile lists of "Hot Dogs." Hot Dogs is the current slang term for the ardent young reformers who are the disciples of Professor Felix Frankfurter, who is known as the "Happy Hot Dog." Professor Frankfurter holds no official position, but there is no question of the tremendous influence which his teachings have had and still have in formulating Administration policies.

AAA Acceptance

The Presidential announcement that the AAA must be regarded as a permanent arm of Government and not merely as an emergency measure is looked upon here as a clever piece of political strategy. There cannot be any question that the beneficiaries of AAA like it; the recent ten-to-one vote for the continuation of the corn-hog program is pointed to as convincing proof, if any were needed. In promising the farmers that AAA is to be continued permanently, the Administrator puts the issue squarely up to the Republicans who, it is conceded, must go along with AAA or offer some acceptable substitute which has not yet been formulated.

The European war situation has brought the question of national defense again sharply to the front. The next session of Congress may bring about a show-down between the "peace-at-any-price" followers of Senator Nye, and the "big navy" advocates, among whom President Roosevelt himself has heretofore been numbered.

What our Government's policy will be may be partly determined by the outcome of the Naval Conference which is to meet in London on December 2. There is not even the pretense of calling this a disarmament conference. The expectation is that England, and most of the other naval powers represented, will press for agreements permitting them to increase their naval strength, and in that case it would seem to be up to the United States to do likewise.
