IN WASHINGTON

United States Senator

The next four months may prove to be one of the most eventful periods in the Seventy-fifth Congress. The legislation passed and the issues raised will certainly have a sweeping effect on the whole functions of the Federal Government. Few can predict anywhere near accurately what that effect will be.

Will the President's Supreme Court plan pass through opposition which, to say the least, is formidable? Will reorganization of the executive branch of the Government, as recommended by the President, withstand objections raised, or will it survive? Will the new farm proposals solve agricultural ills in the way proponents claim? Will the President's ideas for relief funds prevail or will the bloc seeking larger amounts win out?

Let me hasten to say that I cannot answer those questions. Weeks of committee studies, hearings, public sentiment and many other factors enter into the situation and must be considered before the answers are found. However, it may be said that the individual members of Congress, perhaps as never before, appreciate the grave significance of the questions and "behind the scenes"—in the quiet of offices and committee rooms—are giving all facts studied attention.

At the moment the Supreme Court is far and away ahead of all other issues from the standpoint of importance and public interest. Throughout our whole history any suggestion affecting the nation's highest tribunal has brought a barrage of public statements. Fortunately, the radio offers a new form of discussion, and, with the press, gives our people ample means of hearing and reading both sides of the question.

Whatever may be said, for or against the President's court plan, there should be kept in mind the fact that the Chief Executive was given a tremendous vote of confidence last November. The majority of our people tendered this vote of confidence. Therefore, any recommendation made by the President deserves to be weighed on its merits and given the acid test of "value to the public good," rather than be affected by snap judgment. The people, with their views reflected in Congress, will be the final arbitrator. It is an axiom of political economy that the masses will, in the final analysis, find the correct answer to any question.

For the moment, the proposal for reorganization of the executive branches of the Government is in the background. Directly, it may carry as much significance to our people as the Supreme Court plan, although it does not stand out near so high in public interest.

With regard to the agricultural problem, messages already sent to Congress by the President and reports of those yet to come indicate, that from the standpoint of agriculture generally the "ever-normal granary" idea—a plan for storage of surpluses in normal times to meet times of distress—and an effort to solve the farm tenantry conditions will be the highlights. The latter plan may go so far as to include all rural citizens now suffering low standards of living.

In connection with these situations and problems, it seems unusually significant that the Congress should be considering grave constitutional questions in the same year we begin observance of the 150th anniversary of the constitution. It may be that the Seventy-fifth Congress may leave its footprints on the sands of time from the standpoint of constitutional action.

Therefore, these problems should be considered without hysteria, without swayed public opinion, and without political bias. What is best for our people? How can that best be attained? Those are the real questions as Congress comes from around the curves of organization and preliminaries and enters the gruelling speedway stretch of the next four months.

The Benson's must ha' struck it rich all right— A money order for... a hundred bucks! Old Monkey Ward and Sears gets all the trade Up here. What's this? Is Jem a-courtin' Sal? He writes 'bout ev'ry day from that there camp Them C. C. C.'s has got on Baldy Creek. She shore has got a purty figger, though! An' here's a letter from that boy in school! At Boone—young Zeb—I'll bet he's dunnin' Dad.

At last the job is done and I kin rest. It won't be long afore the government Will pension me—I'm almost sixty-five. And been in service over twenty years. I reckon I done earned a rest by now— A-workin' like a dog in sleet and snow. In mud, in dust, for six days ev'ry week. With two weeks off a year for all this time. I'll set around an' smoke my cob an' read. —William Dalzell Trader. Ferguson, N. C.
