

Few Short Of Goal Of 2,000 Signers For Soil Program

will be reached by June 11, deadline for signing to participate in the program this year.

Approximately $35,000 was paid to farmers of Wilkes for compliance under the program last year and it is expected that payments this year will easily double that amount.

Mr. Hendren has extended an invitation for any other farmers interested to call at his office in the courthouse before the deadline on June 12 and sign a work sheet, which entails no obligation and contains no contract, but which merely acts as a basis for computing benefits according to provisions of the act for certain farm practices with a double objective—conservation of the soil and curtailment of cash crops.

Bennett Gilbert, a 4-H club member of Catawba, reports an average of 26 eggs a day from a flock of 32 Rhode Island Red hens. He has sold 17 dozen eggs to the local hatchery at a price averaging 15 cents above the local market price.
