Machine Shop Is Near Completion; 6 Other Buildings

Begin Work on Paint Shop; Others Include Storage and Repair Houses

TO IMPROVE ROAD
Leading From East Bridge to Intersection With Highway No. 321

Work is progressing at a satisfactory pace on the Highway Division shop on the opposite side of the Yadkin from east end of North Wilkesboro.

Workmen have almost completed the main structure, a combination repair and machine shop with dimensions of 73 x 115 feet. It is of frame and steel construction but with a concrete floor.

The next building to be erected on the 80-acre tract of land purchased by the highway department will be a paint shop 25 by 75 feet and work has begun on the foundation.

There will also be a coal shed 25 by 50; a storage warehouse 25 by 50; a blacksmith shop 25 by 40; a concrete wash rack 100 feet long and a grease pit of the same dimensions; the remaining building will be an oil storage warehouse and service station for highway equipment.

W. Lloyd Cutting, construction supervisor, said that the structures will represent a standard of modern building construction in the district, compared with Wilkes, Surry, Yadkin, Forsyth, Davie, Alleghany, Ashe, Watauga, Caldwell and Avery counties.

In addition to the shop here, Mr. Cutting is also supervising construction of prison camps in Alleghany and Avery counties. Later construction on the land purchased by the state here will include a 200-man prison camp near the shop.

In order to make the shop and prison camp easily accessible the road will be reconstructed from what is known locally as the lower town bridge to highway 421 about one mile east of Wilkesboro.
