Hubbard, Jr., a recent bride, who before marriage was Miss Maryn Gwyn Williams, of this city. Sharing honors with Mrs. Hubbard were Mrs. Charles E. Hulcher, another bride, the former Miss Adeline Jones, of North Wilkesboro, and Miss Anne Elizabeth Faw, who was wed Saturday to Dr. Rufus Morrow, of Mexico.

About forty guests from the younger set called during the tea hour 4:30 to 5:30 and were greeted at the front door by Mrs. J. B. McCoy. Standing in the receiving line were the hostess and her mother, Mrs. Clements, and the two brides and bride-to-be. Just at the close of tea Miss Clements presented each of the honored guests with lovely gifts.

Miss Margaret Faw directed callers to the dining room where an ice course was served by Miss Rebecca Brame and Miss Elizabeth Johnson. The mother of the three honorees, Mrs. P. M. Williams, Mrs. W. E. Jones, and Mrs. C. C. Faw, were present throughout the hour and visited with the guests.

Assisting Mrs. Coffey with the serving were her two sisters, Mrs. L. M. Nelson and Miss Elizabeth Finley.

America's Seeing U. S. This Year

The average American's insatiable wanderlust—his compelling desire to go new places and see new things—has earned for the United States the reputation of being a nation of travelers. Money left abroad by travelers is still a big factor in international exchange, but there has been a decided swing to domestic travel in the last few years. More Americans are seeing America than ever before.

No doubt the strenuous and continuous efforts of the leading American transportation companies in advertising the charms of our native land are bearing fruit. Likewise the recent improvements in equipment and service as well as reduced fares have been a decided factor in boosting the volume of travel.

The Greyhound Bus Lines, in particular, have been one of the most important causes for the greatly renewed interest in the American scene. People traveling for pleasure like to see the country they are passing through. From a bus window every traveler gets a leisurely, intimate view, a "close-up" of the scenic grandeur that lines our highways.

Some people say a traveler can get as fine a view from his own car. Perhaps he could if he didn't have to concentrate on sign posts, oil gauges, white lines, sharp turns, and traffic cops as well. Traveling by bus, passengers seem to feel that age-old carefreedom of the open road once again.

Modern engineering's gift to the traveling public has been a notable one, too. Coaches are now being turned out of the great factories which would have seemed incredible just a few short years ago. Greyhound's new streamlined Super-Coaches are a good example. These luxurious buses have nothing but a name in common with the old-time conveyances in use in the earlier days. The motor placed at the rear to do away with fumes and vibration—the higher passenger deck to give travelers an unobstructed view—the chairs that recline at four different comfortable positions—locked, weatherproof baggage compartments below deck—these are just a few of the advancements to be found in Greyhound Super-Coaches.

Maybe it's curiosity that tempts passengers to use the new coaches the first time, but the fact that passengers keep coming back for more indicates that these fine new buses have met a definite need of the American traveler. However, these splendid buses alone do not fully explain the greatly increased travel. They are just a means to an end, after all—people don't ride buses just to ride, but to get somewhere. Part of the answer must be that Americans are at last awakened to the fact that there is a lot to see in this country of ours. And, of course, they are right.

There is not a country in Europe that can offer the vivid contrasts of the United States. There are great cities and picturesque hamlets strewn all over the map. Travelers have a choice of three dissimilar coast lines, dozens of mountain ranges from the grandeur of the Rockies to the placid, comfortable charm of the Berkshire Hills. There are deserts, lakes, great woods and prairies—every form of scenery Nature has to provide. Whatever anybody's favorite climate may be—high and dry, mountain cool, sea breezy, there's always some place in America where he can find it.

More and more people are coming to realize that an Independence Hall in Philadelphia or a Spanish mission in San Antonio is just as exciting an historical treasure as some cathedral in a French provincial town—that Atlantic City is just as gay, cosmopolitan, and refreshing as Deauville or the Lido. For every foreign temple, gorge, waterfall, bay, beach, or spa—there is a made-in-America counterpart. Prospective travelers now find that more and more places are within their reach than in the not-too-distant past. For Greyhound low fares amount to the same thing as drama intermingled.

Miller's Creek P. T. A. Will Present Play

The Parent-Teacher Association of the Miller's Creek high school is sponsoring a three-act musical comedy "Black-Eyed Susan" to be presented at the school auditorium on Friday night, June 17, at 8 p. m.

The plot revolves around five old maids, played by Wills Dean Bumgarner, Virginia Reeves, Ella Sue Eller, Evelyn Turner and Luey Ruten, who try to capture for husbands five old bachelors played by John Walter Götter, Edd Bumgarner, Yaughn Pierce, Orrin Bumgarner and Henry Craven. A young and handsome newspaper reporter played by H. D. Candill, Jr., falls in love with the heroine "Black-Eyed Susan" portrayed by Bonnie Bumgarner. Two negro character parts are well taken by Frances Brookshire and Andrew Whittington.

Several chorus numbers are very entertaining, performed by girls in lovely costumes. Among those taking part in the choruses are Beth and Helen Bumgarner and Vivian and Doris Tulbert.

The play is being directed by Mrs. Evelyn Hurst. Admission is children 15c and adults 30c. All tickets purchased in advance will be 5c cheaper. Proceeds will go to the benefit of the school.

Democrats Bitterly Assailed; Rail Bill May Extend Session

Washington, June 18.—Representative Bertrand Snell, the minority leader, said today the closing days of Congress had been marked by the most "bitter, shameless playing of politics" he had witnessed in 24 years in the house.

"The tactics of Tammany Hall and Boss Tweed have now been brought inside the doors of the United States capital," Snell declared in a statement. "Not even the spittle of Andrew Jackson's day were hotter than have been the new dealers."

Snell said he had in mind "the repeated refusal of the Democratic leaders in recent days to provide punishment for those who use federal relief funds to play politics with human misery—the meanest thing one man can do to another."

Ruby Carlton, colored, age 27, wife of Bright Carlton, of Boomer, died Friday and funeral service was held Saturday at Thankful church. Surviving are her husband and four children.

Commends Papers For Support Of Health Activity

Raleigh—One of the most hopeful signs of the times is the manner in which the press strives to the support of movements designed to promote human welfare and bring relief to the underprivileged and the afflicted," observed Dr. Carl V. Reynolds, State Health Officer.

"So long as our newspapers maintain their present standard, there need be no fear that this country will fall into the hands of those who might seek to destroy our most cherished institutions or the high purposes to which they are dedicated," he continued. "I have in mind, in particular, at this time the wholehearted support our editors here in North Carolina are giving the drive to bring syphilis under control and, finally, to eradicate it. I do not recall a single instance where such support has been withheld. On the contrary, the newspapers—daily and weekly—have not only presented all the facts submitted to them for the enlightenment of the public, but they have also given the movement their unstinted editorial support."
