Preserving Tips

College Station, Raleigh, April 17.—With present indications denoting an abundance of strawberries this spring, much of the crop will find its way into the preserving kettle.

Mrs. Cornelia C. Morris, extension economist in food conservation and marketing at State college, pointed out that strawberry jam is a national favorite and has good marketing possibilities if well made and packed in attractive containers.

Experiments have proved that the texture and color of the berries are better if small quantities are cooked at a time.

Many farm women dispose of their surplus jams and preserves on home demonstration curb markets each year, Mrs. Morris said. These markets afford a ready sale of farm products to city housewives who like to buy directly from the rural sellers.

In making strawberry jam, Mrs. Morris advised the use of two quarts of berries and four and one-half cups of sugar. After the berries have been crushed, the sugar is added, and the mixture cooked until it forms a sheet of jelly when poured from the side of the spoon. The jam should be stirred constantly with a wooden spoon. At the completion of the cooking, the jam should be poured immediately into hot, sterilized jars and sealed.

Mrs. W. E. Jones attended the silver wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. J. Paul Teal in Wadesboro Tuesday evening. She was accompanied there by Mrs. O. C. Wall, of Thomasville, who was also a guest at the anniversary.

Poultryman Believes More Flocks Needed

T. T. Brown, extension poultryman at State College, believes that every farm should have from 50 to several hundred purebred hens.

"We are not advocating that farmers quit raising tobacco and cotton and go into the poultry business, but a good flock should occupy a definite place on every farm," he said.

The number of birds would depend, of course, on convenience, labor, and adaptability of labor and conditions to poultry raising. Some farmers are actually advised to reduce the size of their flocks because of lack of facilities.

North Carolina's poultry program could be improved greatly, Brown said. At present, most of State's egg supply comes in two or three of the spring months. After that, many wholesalers are forced to go out of the State to get sufficient eggs to meet their demands.

With improved farm flocks, the egg supply could be spread more evenly over the year. Such a condition would bring about the establishment of local packing plants for the handling of surplus products.

These plants could then furnish North Carolina jobbers with a local supply, thus preventing the shipping in of outside stocks.

Poultry dressing and storage plants are badly needed in the State, but prospective business men hesitate to start such activities when they find the inadequate farm flock and egg supply except during the spring months, Brown said.

VOTE FOR DEAD MAN

Almost 200 High Point voters cast ballots for a dead man in the Democratic primary Saturday. C. L. Gray, who died shortly before the primary, received 185 votes for the office of constable, on the basis of incomplete returns, Mr. Abbott said. His ballots were not tabulated in the returns to be certified by the county board of elections. The voters either had not heard of the candidate's death or else were voting blindly.

Max Wood Dead

Max Wood, age 31, for many years a well known colored laborer in the Wilkesboro, died Thursday. Funeral service was held Friday and burial was in Brown cemetery. Surviving are his wife, Ruth Wood, two children, two sisters and one brother.

More About Kitchens

Who likes Winter, anyhow? Outside of a few chest-thumpers who stand up healthily and say cold weather makes 'em feel fine! Most of us sort of resign ourselves to a certain amount of chills and frosts and do our best to hole in like a rabbit and wait.

There are, however, a few small things we can do to make our winter more enjoyable. For one thing, we can make ourselves a nice warm, bright kitchen where the whole family can gather... and speaking of color, the rainbow's the limit... although it's well to choose kitchen color which is pale enough to reflect plenty of light.

Parkway to Be Longest and Most Distinguished Road in America

By STANLEY W. ABBOTT
The Shenandoah-Great Smoky Mountains National Parkway now being planned by the National Government along the Blue Ridge mountains is visualized by many as the most important public improvement since railroad days in the growth of western North Carolina. Five hundred miles in length and traversing Virginia as well as this State, the Parkway is one of the longest to be planned as a single unit in American road-building history.

The Shenandoah-Great Smoky Mountains National Parkway now being planned by the National Government along the Blue Ridge mountains is visualized by many as the most important public improvement since railroad days in the growth of western North Carolina. Five hundred miles in length and traversing Virginia as well as this State, the Parkway is one of the longest to be planned as a single unit in American road-building history.

It should be unnecessary to point out the recreational value of the Appalachians to its close neighbors. The Carolina-Virginia mountains in their variety and in their forest-clad friendliness call for a high praise from the most casual observer. To assure for all time and all people this great recreation resource, the most important aspect of the national project is that it will provide a "Parkway" as contrasted with the ordinary commercial highway (with which the American tourist is all too familiar).

The parkway idea is a relatively new and a highly specialized solution for the traffic problem. It may be defined briefly as a road devoted to recreation and located within a "elongated park" Parkways have been developed in suburban regions near New York City and in the case of the Mt. Vernon Memorial Drive near Washington. The worthwhileness of this type of drive in the suburban plan has been amply demonstrated not only as a benefit to public recreation, but as the most efficient solution yet devised for safe and rapid movement of passenger cars. These parkways, however, can hardly be pointed to as true prototypes for the park-to-park program. This project is a pioneer type by which the national government seeks to meet on a broad scale of interstate planning the ever-increasing demands of the vacation tourist.

Probably no scenic parkway in the world approaches the magnitude of this conception. Technicians recognize three elements of great importance distinguishing the parkway from the common road; first, a sufficient width of park land to provide a protective "buffer" on both sides of the paved motorway, excluding private frontage and giving opportunity for extensive roadside beautification; second, elimination of principal road crossings by means of bridges over or under the parkway; and, finally, the spacing of access roadways at infrequent intervals to minimize the friction with the main traffic stream. Of these principles, that doors, turn your back on it, and paint your kitchen yellow, in a good washable finish. And again, be sure it's washable, because there will be finger prints and cooking stains and smoke from the frying pan, and all sorts of things you'll want to take off your walls.

Cream is a good trim color with yellow. Cream colored enamel for woodwork and doors... and, if you can stretch the budget that far, a nice new linoleum in warm reddish tones... or, if you like contrast, blue. Incidentally, blue enamel would look nice as a backing in your cupboards and shelves, and perhaps white net curtains with a blue ruffle or so at the windows. Sounds nice, doesn't it?

It is nice, too. And as good a tonic for doing away with "Winter Blues" as anything else in the world. If, for some reason, you hate yellow like poison, there are lots of other combinations you may use. How about pink and cream? Pink walls and cream woodwork? Or how about pale gray walls and something revolutionary like light pink or light green for woodwork and doors?

Announces Winners Of Washington Trip

Selected on a basis of their outstanding records, four North Carolina club members will be awarded a trip to the National club encampment in Washington, D. C., June 14-23. L. R. Hunter, club leader at State College, has announced.

Winners from among the State's 45,000 club boys and girls were Oland Peela, Wayne County; Elizabeth Hande, Cleveland county; Louise Bunn, Edgecombe county; and Roger Pollock, Jones county.

Eighteen-year-old Miss Randle made her most outstanding record in clothing. However, she completed two canning projects, one room improvement project, two wildlife projects, and a library project in 1937. Not only has she excelled in her leadership activities and her project work, but she has also shown talent in dramatics, public speaking, and drawing.

Miss Bunn, also 18, has held the highest offices in her local club and in the county council and federation in her seven years of club work. She has completed projects in foods, clothing, room improvement, home beautification, gardening, and for two years served as a local 4-H club leader.

Young Peela, 17, did his most successful work with swine. Beginning in 1931, he has raised prize pigs which have captured many awards at county and State fairs. His total profits from club work have amounted to $1,341.25. Oland is the second member of the Peela family to win a trip to the national encampment in the nation's capital, an older brother having gone several years ago.

Seventeen-year-old Pollock has carried on various projects since joining a 4-H club in 1933. His chief work has been with the corn, and cotton. During the time, he has made a $1,124.75 profit from his ventures.

TWO PERSONS KILLED IN AIRPLANE CRASH

Bohemia, Pa., June 12.—A youthful airplane passenger was killed and the pilot fatally injured late today when their plane crashed in a temporary landing field near Desloge, Mo., a few miles south of here.

Pilot D. D. Stockberger, of St. Louis, died in a Boone Terre hospital shortly after the crash. The single passenger was identified as Vernon Francis, 18, of First River, Mo.

The word hammer comes from the Scandinavian word, hamarr, meaning a rock.

Sentinel of Health

Don't Neglect Them!

Nature designed the kidneys to do a marvelous job. Their task is to keep the flowing blood stream free of all wastes and poisons. The soil of the body is constantly producing wastes which the kidneys must remove from the blood if good health is to be maintained. If the kidneys fail to function, Nature intended, there is retention of waste that may cause body-wide distress. One may suffer nagging headaches, persistent backache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—fast tired, nervous, all week out.

Frequent, steady or becoming passage may be further evidence of kidney or bladder disturbances. The only safe and effective treatment is a diuretic medicine to help the kidneys get rid of excess poisonous body wastes. Doan's Pills. They have had more than forty years of public approval. Are endorsed the country over. Insist on Doan's. Sold at all drug stores.
