great man, is Nick, but he can be rough. Nick can do what he likes with me. I'm his. I'd be dead now if it hadn't been for Nick."

She ran before him down the stairs. Not until they were on the pavement did he come up to her. Then she stopped again and gripped his arm. "I must talk to you. You must tell me about Nick."

"All right. I'll take you somewhere."

Their taxi moved toward some address he gave the driver.

"Do you like to dance," asked Ayleward.

"Yes. But I'm not dressed for a restaurant and my mother—" She was going to say, "has never let me go" but checked herself with an hysterical impulse toward laughter. What did that mother on her knees before an altar know of Lynda Sandal, the adventuress?

"You're dressed for the place I'm taking you to, only I will say you're a bit staid."

"I thought it was all right."

"So it is. Pretty cute get-up. You're on the stage anyway, aren't you?"

"Why, no, Mr. Ayleward."

"You talk like an actress somehow. Your r's or something. I like it awfully."

She stiffened. "I am going with you," she said with her princess air, "because I want to learn something about my father. You understand that, don't you, Mr. Ayleward? It is not desire for your companionship."

"Oh, I see. I hadn't really analyzed the situation. All right. Here we are, Miss Sandal."

He held her out and gave a number or a name, some open sesame at a grilled door under a flight of marble steps. Lynda found herself seated on a bench

Still Coughing?

No matter how many medicines you have tried for your common cough, chest cold, or bronchial irritation, you may get relief now with Creomulsion. Serious trouble may be brewing and you cannot afford to take a chance with any remedy less potent than Creomulsion, which goes right to the seat of the trouble and aids nature to soothe and heal the inflamed mucous membranes and to loosen and expel germ-laden phlegm.

Even if other remedies have failed, don't be discouraged, try Creomulsion. Your druggist is authorized to refund your money if you are not thoroughly satisfied with the benefits obtained. Creomulsion is one word, ask for it plainly, see that the name on the bottle is Creomulsion, and you'll get the genuine product and the relief you want. (Adv.)

against a wall, Jock opposite her across a bare small narrow table. It held one shaded light. Jock ordered supper food. Mechanical music was playing. The floor was filled with dancers. Others drank and ate.

Lynda drank the black coffee Jock had ordered for her. Jock was watching the dancers.

"I ought not to let you do this for me," said Lynda suddenly. "I ought not to let you, I mean, give me a good time. That wasn't what I meant to do. You see of course I don't know you well and I may change my mind but it seems only fair to tell you that—that—" her cheeks were hot with the effort of such a statement, "that I don't really like you at all yet, Mr. Ayleward."

That's O. K with me," he grinned, glancing at her and away.

"I did not suppose it would matter to you but I felt that I ought to be honest with you. And we shall probably be running into each other now and then. Women usually like you, I understand."

"You understand? Who told you that tale?"

"Nick did. Want to dance?"

"But I came here to ask you—"

"Want to dance?"

She rose. He took her into his arms so tightly that she could hardly breathe.

"Don't! I can't dance... that way—please."

"Oh, I forgot. Let me see. Sure. This is the way, isn't it?" and he moved with her out on the floor, dancing with the ease, the pride and the smoothness of a gentleman. And he danced beautifully.

"Where did you pick it up?" he asked her.

"A Frenchwoman came to the convent to teach me. The nuns did not really approve but my mother—but they had orders."

"You mean you were educated in a French convent?"

"Yes." She was annoyed. It was no part of her intention to tell anything of her own life as Jocelyn Harlowe to this young man.

"Aren't there some very queer sort of people here tonight?" asked Lynda.

"Are there? I hadn't noticed it."

"Look now, that big man with a white scar; dancing with the woman in—shoulder straps."

"In and out of 'em, eh? Well, yes, you might perhaps call him queer. He's Turi Padrona. Just out."

"Of the hospital?"

"From up the river. He got off with two years."

"Oh, I can't stay here, Mr. Ayleward. I can't stay in a room with—criminals!"

"Hullo!" said Jock. "Go easy. If Mr. Padrona heard you he might resent it."

He gave her a queer long glance and took her back to the table silently. He called for his check. Lynda was distressed.

"I haven't asked you... you've told me nothing about Nick."

"Maybe you'd better leave it to him. He would like to tell you himself perhaps. It seems a queer question but I gather you are a queer family—how long have you known your father?"

"Only since one night a few weeks ago."

"You live here in New York alone?"

"No. With my mother."

Jock's eyes opened. "You mean Nick's got a wife here in New York?"

"They have been divorced for very long. I do not know their history."

"Nor do I, Miss Sandal. believe me I did not even know his wife was living nor, until I met you there that night, that he had any child."

"You won't dance just once more?"

Lynda was tempted. "If you promise not to let me touch a man."

"Not touch the jailbird, eh?"

Apple Week Calls For Menu Specials

By MISS HARRIET MCGOOGAN

(Home Demonstration Agent). Let's celebrate National "Apple Week" with some special on our menu that will make your meals more appetizing and less expensive.

Brown Betty is an old favorite but its possibilities for variation make it always interesting.

- 4 Apples pared and sliced
- 2 cups bread crumbs
- 4 tablespoons butter
- 1-2 cup brown sugar
- 1-2 teaspoon cinnamon
- 1-4 cup cold water

Cover bottom of buttered baking dish with crumbs. Cover with slices of apples, sprinkle with part of the sugar and with cinnamon. Dot with butter. Repeat until all ingredients are used, then pour water over top. Bake in a moderate oven 3-4 hour. Serve with whipped cream or hard sauce.

Cake or gingerbread crumbs may be substituted for the bread crumbs, white sugar for brown, milk for water. If water is used, try adding the juice of one lemon. On a special occasion use orange or pineapple juice instead of the water. This is a tasty dessert, quickly prepared and inexpensive.

If your family likes sweet potatoes, they will go for scalloped sweet potatoes and apples. Alternate layers of sliced sweet potatoes and apples in a buttered baking dish. Season each layer with salt, brown sugar and butter. Add a small amount of water and cover with a layer of buttered crumbs. Cover and bake until almost done. Remove cover to brown.

Try Apple Raisin pie with cheese crust.

President Urged To Lift Ban On John Strachey

President Roosevelt has been urged by the American Civil Liberties Union and leading liberals to intervene in the exclusion by immigration authorities of John Strachey, British writer and lecturer, detained at Ellis Island upon his arrival in New York this week.

A petition wired to the President and signed by prominent liberals at the request of the Civil Liberties Union declared:

"The unprecedented revocation by the State Department of John Strachey's visa after sailing and consequent exclusion by immigration authorities without a full hearing is so unfair a proceeding as to justify your intervention. We urge restoration of Mr. Strachey's visa, his admission to ball and a full hearing on the charges."

Among those, signing the petition were: Frank S. Graham, president of the University of North Carolina; Robert D. Leigh, president of Bennington College; Stephen Vincent Benet, poet; Cass Canfield, president of Harpers; Rev. Henry Sloane Coffin, President, Union Theological Seminary; Mary E. Woolley, former president of Mt. Holyoke College; Paul Kellogg, editor of Survey Graphic; Samuel Hopkins Adams, writer; Bruce Bliven, editor; New Republic; Helen Hall, director, Henry Street Settlement; Ordway Tead, editor, Kenneth E. Walser, prominent American Legionnaire; Prof. Reinhold Niebuhr, Union Theological Seminary; Will Irvin, writer; and Prof. Arthur L. Swift, Union Theological Seminary.

State College Answers Timely Farm Questions

Question: Would it pay to seed oats as a nurse crop with the pasture seed mixture?

Answer: While it is true that you would get some earlier grazing, the injury from livestock trampling on the young seedlings and other factors would more than offset the benefits. The pasture would also be harmed by the excess use of plant food and moisture. In the long run it would be best to seed the pasture without a nurse crop. From two to four hundred pounds of a 2-12-4 fertilizer mixture should be used on the pasture to the acre with about two thousand pounds of limestone if the land has been limed.

Greyhound Wins An Award For Safety

Central Division Manager W. E. Geoghan and Director of Safety and Personnel Colonel P. D. Shingleton of Atlantic Greyhound Lines jointly accept the National Safety Council trophy from R. C. Haven, Chairman of the Commercial Vehicle Section of the National Safety Council, during the Silver Jubilee Safety Congress and Exposition held at the Stevens Hotel in Chicago from October 13th to 15th. Acceptance was on behalf of the 48 drivers in the Atlantic Greyhound Central Division.

"A Greyhound driver can never be afforded to take a chance." It is by following this principle that a Greyhound Company has won the National Safety Council award each year that such a trophy has been offered. And that slogan played a big part in the enviable Highway Safety record set again this year by the Central Division of Atlantic Greyhound Lines when that division operated 164,944 miles per accident from July 1, 1937 to June 30, 1938.

Greyhound companies also took second and third places in the 1937-38 National Safety Council Inter-city Bus Division. Pacific Greyhound, last year's first place winner, won second place with an average of 135,310 miles per mishap. In third place was the Director of the Greyhound Management Company with 168 miles per accident. The winning Atlantic Greyhound Division operated 2,981,000 miles without a single fatality. National Safety Council regulations interpret an accident thus: "A reportable accident is any accident in which the contestant's vehicle is involved, unless properly parked, where such accident results in death, personal injury, or property damage, regardless of who was hit, what property was damaged, or who was responsible."
