Plowing Of Terraced Fields Is Explained

An automobile requires oil and grease to keep it in good working condition. Likewise, a terraced field must have consideration at plowing time to maintain it, says H. M. Ellis, agricultural engineer of the State College Extension Service.

Farmers in many sections of North Carolina will be breaking land soon, and unless they use proper methods of plowing, the work they have done during the winter in building terraces is likely to prove worthless. For this reason, Ellis says, assistant farm agents in most counties of the State are prepared to conduct demonstrations showing how to plow terraced fields.

These demonstrations may be arranged upon request by groups of farmers, and the agents will attempt to make them as convenient as possible by holding them at or near the time the breaking of ground is started.

In explanation of proper methods of plowing terraced land, Ellis says: "When breaking land the terrace should always be broken first by back-furrowing on the ridge. The furrows are continued (throwing the soil toward the ridge) until the bottom of the flow line is reached.

"A second furrow is then started 12 to 14 feet above the terrace channel. Plowing is continued toward this back furrow, throwing the soil uphill out of the channel, until the channel is again reached. This leaves an unbroken strip between terraces which may be broken as a separate land.

The distance of the back furrow above the channel should be varied from year to year to avoid the formation of a deep dead furrow midway between terraces and also a ridge just above the flow line."

State College Answers Timely Farm Question

Question: When should fertilizer be put in for tobacco?

Answer: The fertilizer should be drilled in the rows about two weeks prior to planting in the field. A broad ridge, made by running two big furrows with a turn plow and then breaking the middles with a sweep will usually aid in getting a better stand and will produce quicker growth. The fertilizer should be thoroughly mixed with the soil before the row is ridged. From 800 to 1,000 pounds of a 3-8-5 tobacco fertilizer should be used to the acre where the crop is to follow corn rotation.

State College Answers Timely Farm Questions

Question: How early should baby chicks be given a grain ration?

Answer: Chicks should be given grain feed after the first seven to ten days. This should be fed two or three times a day on top of the mash. It is very essential that sufficient mash hopper space be supplied so that the chicks can all eat at one time. As early hatched chicks do not have access to range and direct sunlight or green feed, their ration should be supplemented with one and one-half per cent of straight cod liver oil that contains 85 U. S. P. units of vitamin D per gram and not less than 600 U. S. P. units of vitamin per gram.

GRAZING CROPS

There are 107 Currtruck farmers who are providing winter grazing crops for their pigs. This means healthy pigs, grown under sanitary conditions and more profits to the owners, says L. A. Powell, county agent, who reports 574.9 acres of winter cover crops planted largely for this purpose.

CONTROLS EROSION

Erskine Huskins of Newdale, Yancey county, notes that the least soil erosion from the open land on his farm is where he has a good alfalfa sod. No apparent erosion can be seen there, he reported to W. C. Maness, county agent.

With Girl Scouts

Troop Number 1 of the Girl Scouts met Saturday, February 4 from 3:00 to 4:00 p.m. The first part of the meeting was taken up with a review of requirements for the rank of second class Scout. One interesting part of the review was a memory test in which the girls were asked to look at twenty-five small articles for a few minutes and then list as many of them as possible. The main part of the time was given over to work on hobbies. One meeting each month is set aside for hobby work and the Scouts have found many interesting things to devote this time to collecting all kinds of things from popular songs to oddly-shaped bottles is a favorite pastime. A little time was spent in drilling and then Miss Ross took the girls to the drug store for "ice cream cones."

Scouting is full of fun as well as work and we would like more girls to share in it. Any one interested in joining the troop is welcome to come to the meetings on Saturday afternoon at 2:00 o'clock.—Reported.
