

Hatchery Owner

C. C. Gambill, one of Wilkes county's best known citizens, is shown here in the Wilkes Hatchery, which he owns and operates. Mr. Gambill predicts continued rapid growth of the poultry industry in Wilkes county.

Wilkes Hatchery Is Pioneer Firm

C. C. Gambill, Owner, Is A Very Successful Producer Of Poultry

The Wilkes Hatchery was the first commercial chick hatching outfit established in this section of North Carolina.

Although it was ultra modern in its day, the equipment of Wilkes Hatchery when it was formed was insignificant compared to the modern Hatchery plant which is now Wilkes Hatchery and owned and operated by Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Gambill. Mr. Gambill purchased the hatchery from J. C. Henry in 1920. It was operated at its location at that time on the corner of Sixth and F streets for two years and in 1921 was moved to the Phillips building on Teath street, its present location. At the time Mr. Gambill purchased the hatchery 30,000 chicks were being hatched yearly and some idea of the growth of the business can be gained by a comparison—350,000 chicks is considered a good year's business now.

Seven years ago Mr. Gambill began the manufacture of Gambill's feeds and the business has grown rapidly until at the present rate an enormous amount of feeds are manufactured and sold by Mr. Gambill's plant yearly.

Mr. Gambill is one of the county's best known citizens. He has lived in and near North Wilkesboro since 1900. He remembers very distinctly when he came to North Wilkesboro there was only one thing in town that could be classed as a sidewalk. That was a board walk from the depot to Dr. Hauser's boarding house.

He has witnessed and has materially aided in the tremendous growth of the poultry business in Wilkes county during the past ten years in Wilkes county and freely predicts that the next ten years will show even greater growth because poultry offers such a splendid opportunity for the person with a small farm to supplement income from field and garden crops.

Chickens exhibited by Mr. Gambill at the North Carolina state fair and in Charlotte during the past five years have won practically every honor for which they were entered. He says his is typical of Wilkes chickens, which are the best in the country. He attended the World's Poultry congress last year with the intention of buying some better chickens but came back without any because he did not find any which he considered better than the barred rocks in his own poultry yard.

THE SCOUT REPORTER

By EDWIN LONG
Scribe of Troop 35

Nearby Scout's Aided Troop No. 35 Overnight Camp at Stone Mt.

Rain had been falling all week, but Troop 35 members had plans for an overnight camp, so with their leaders motto—"Rain or Shine We Go," seven boys were present with their Scoutmaster, to take anything the weather man could bring forth.

Our destination was Stone Mountain. We arrived there safe and sound. Immediately we pitched a 8 by 10 foot tent, and trenched it for bad weather.

The boys cooked in two's, preparing some of the best meals yet cooked on any over-night hike this season. After supper there were hikes, and general merry-making until bed-time.

The night was cloudy but the moon peaked out several times.

The boys were up by 6:00 a. m., and soon had another meal under way. We have just finished when those expected rains began to fall. We broke camp at Stone Mountain and transferred to Camp Highbury, where we have all weather facilities, including a 32 by 32 foot hut. There we prepared dinner.

We the leaders of Troop 35 plan these overnight camp weeks in advance. We prepare them to take care of the boys under any conditions, and have found from years of camping experience in all kinds of weather, that the largest majority of boys, rather than enjoy a few hardships in preference to having a perfect sunny day and moon-light nights. The parents on the other hand have a fear, and horror, just thinking about their sons staying out in the open when it is the least bit bad. This makes it difficult for the Scoutmasters to plan a first class outdoor program for the members of the Troop, which are usually planned for a certain number of boys.

Take the outdoor program out of Scouting, and you take the fundamental principles on which Scouting is built.

AMBIDEXTROUS NECKING!

Adding Another Room To Spencer Tracy's Famous "Hall of Fame"

Spencer Tracy is adding another room to his own Hall of Fame. The star, aside from delivering many of the screen's finest performances, invariably leaves one scene in a motion picture which survives a memory for years, sometimes after the theme of the story is forgotten.

Such settings constitute Tracy's Hall of Fame, to which he is now adding another room in "Northwest Passage," which is at the Liberty Theatre for a one day showing—Monday only.

Hollywood expects Tracy's memorable scene in this picture to be that action in which he softly coaxes and persuades Robert Young, as the badly wounded Langdon Towne, to muster the fortitude to carry on the march under his own power because, much as he loves this young soldier, Major Rogers knows he cannot deviate from his hard rule that it must be every man under his own power and the faltering left behind.

Rivalling this scene for memorable Tracy ones is his three-minute talk to his men as he attempts to convince them not to give up at the moment when they are starving.

According to critics, Tracy's first room in his Hall of Fame was the scene on the stage for "The Last Mile" when convicts went berserk under his leadership as lights dimmed to indicate the electric chair had snuffed out another life.

Other Big Scenes

Among his other "rooms" were: the sequences in "The Show Off" where he was proved just a big bluff; his riot scene in "Fury"; that scene in "San Francisco" where he reveals to Jeanette MacDonald his boyhood days with the notorious atheist, Blackie Norton, played by Clark Gable; his noisy scene in "Libeled Lady" with Jean Harlow, when she, as his bride-to-be, threatens to run out on him; the interior of the circus wagon in "They Gave Him a Gun" where Tracy faces Franchot Tone, as the coward with a gun; his courageous death scene in "Captains Courageous"; his death in glory in "Test Pilot"; and the scene in "Boys Town" where, as Father Flanagan, he finds Mickey Rooney, wounded by gangsters, seeking refuge in the silent church.

public production which opens at the Liberty Theatre for a 2-day showing, July 4-5, should be seen by every man, woman and child in America. In the troubled days of the present, it is gratifying to watch a picturization of troubled days in the past, when the innate character and strength of American manhood and womanhood surmounted the greatest obstacles.

"Dark Command" is a faithful adaptation of the famous book of the same title by W. R. Burnett. Its leading roles have been capably portrayed by actors and actresses who typify the American tradition.

John Wayne, who became an overnight sensation through his splendid work in "Stagecoach" and later in "Allegany Uprising," was the ideal choice for the hero of "Dark Command." Rugged, handsome in a sturdy American manner, the former college athlete seems to be a "natural" in all early American and pioneer sagas.

Claire Trevor, lovely, blonde and feminine, plays opposite Wayne in the role of Mary McCloud, aristocratic southern girl who is bewildered by the cruel trend of events that lie in the wake of the Civil War.

Walter Pidgeon, who has previously specialized in drawing room roles, exhibits unforeseen potentialities in the highly dramatic role of Cantrell, the quixotic villain who was gentlemanly school master by day and black-hearted murderer by night.

Roy Rogers is outstanding in the role of Fletch McCloud, the young southern aristocrat who falls under the spell of Cantrell. Raoul Walsh directed for Republic.

Mickey Rooney, who has played everything from Shakespeare down to slap-stick comedy since he was knee-high to a turtle, finally got an assignment that worried him. He had to sing in "Babes in Arms," which opens Tuesday at the Liberty Theatre.

Mickey plays the piano and dances like a streak, but he has never sung a note on the screen, and he was scared to death of the outcome.

Arthur Freed and Busby Berkeley talked Rooney into it after they heard him humming one of his own compositions. They immediately rearranged an "Opera

QUESTIONS and ANSWERS

Question: What variety of soybeans is best for hay?

Answer: The fine stemmed varieties make the best hay and these include the Oototan for the coastal plain section, the Laredo in the piedmont, and Virginia for the mountain section. When other varieties are used, they should be sown very thickly to reduce the size of the stems. Do not cover the seed over one inch deep when planting. In the Mountain and Coastal Plain sections, soybean hay should be cultivated in rows or the weeds may choke it out while in the Piedmont section drilling gives good results.
