

Get Sentences For False Statements In Filing Claims

Raleigh.—Purse strings are being drawn progressively tighter on the State Unemployment Compensation fund against the unscrupulous workers who would try trickery to get money not due them and fines and sentences for violators are becoming longer and heavier, Chairman Charles G. Powell, of the Commission, points out.

Probably once a week, on the average, workers are indicted for drawing or attempting to draw benefits to which they have no legal right, and the courts of the State are giving them more and more trouble. Occasionally, when a worker makes false representations through ignorance of the law, local courts are lenient and let him off with a warning. But when one appears and it is in evidence that he wilfully violated the law to get benefits, the courts either assess a heavy fine or sentence him to the roads.

Recently, one Dudley Corbett, of Clinton, signed "continued claims" for eleven weeks, stating that he had no earnings each week, and drew $6.50 a week, or $71.50 in benefits while his employer testified that he was employed each of the eleven weeks and drew in wages $107.00 during the time. In the Sampson County Recorder's Court he was found guilty and sentenced to six months in jail, to be assigned to work on the roads.

Also recently, one Hiawatha Johnson, colored, filed a claim and continued to report that he was unemployed, while evidence produced in the Hickory Municipal Court showed that he was employed and earning wages during the period of claimed unemployment. Although the claim had not progressed far enough for him to draw benefits, he was sentenced to 30 days on the roads, a sentence which was later changed to a fine and costs of $35.50, which he paid.

"Our local employment offices and field forces are watching diligently to discover any abuse of the rights of workers and to keep the fund for those eligible to draw benefits," Chairman Powell said. "Occasionally one will get by, for a time, but we have many ways to discover these hands, sooner or later, and the violators must pay," he said.

Benefits to North Carolina unemployed workers reached $16,085,888.30 on September 10, while the balance in the State Unemployment Fund on that date was $22,508,167.84. Total receipts of $38,594,056.14 on that date included $37,654,019.61 paid into the fund by N. C. employers and $930,036.53 earned by the State fund in interest on the balance on deposit in the U. S. Treasury.

About 9,000 employers in North Carolina, normally those with eight or more employees, are subject to the State Unemployment Compensation Law.

Egypt Prepares for Any Eventuality

Past the pyramids, ages old symbols of Egypt and the Pharaohs, rear these British Blenheim bombers, as the British and Egyptian forces prepare for any "eventuality." The feared "eventuality," of course, was the long-expected Italian entry into the great war, with a drive at Egypt from Libya as the first move.

Refugee Children Will Adjust Well With Proper Help

An urban paper in North Carolina carried a brief news item recently which illustrates in a graphic way the depth of the second World War's effect on children. The item stated that refugee English girls of eight years living with relatives in an Iowa town had responded to the traditional noontime siren by running frantically about the house looking for a hiding place. They had, of course, been conditioned to the fear that accompanies an air raid alarm.

The immediate response of children in cooperating with the disciplined routine established in warfare is of great importance to their existence, yet the fact that terror and anxiety play a part in this "obedience" is unfortunate. If the frightening circumstances continue long and efforts to stabilize the child's emotional balance were lacking, the personality might be permanently damaged. It is heartening to know that the English Ministry of Health recognizes this increased hazard to refugee child guidance (mental hygiene) clinics for children have been established to give medical-psychiatric attention to serious problems of behavior and personality as they arise.

We can be sure that the refugee children in the Iowa town will receive their fears in the warmth of affection and reassurance which their new home affords. Patience will be used in meeting any other problems that they may have developed. It will be more difficult to remove the disturbing emotional reactions of the children who remain in England. Although the raids will continue to destroy property and human lives, the guidance of English welfare workers will give the children some security. This will be of great mental hygiene importance even though it should be no more than a recognition of the child's problem, and the realization that someone wants to help. The child will not feel alone. The refugee children coming to the United States will be affected in varying degrees of anxiety according to the experiences and the native capacity. Adjusting in America will be made easier by the atmosphere of sympathy which pervades our people. We may look for new understandings of children as we go along, for this is something which has never happened before.

Government figures indicate that nearly 13,000,000 farm family workers and hired hands will be busy with fall crops and livestock during September.
