

War News

Grecian Eastern Army Entrapped

Athens, April 10.—(Thursday)—The Greek high command announced today that Greek troops cut off in eastern Macedonia by the German capture of Salonika were still holding out last yesterday afternoon.

These troops, estimated at 300,000 before the Nazi offensive began, "did not weaken their resistance on the frontier and held their lines intact according to information received during the afternoon."

The strong Greek fortress defenses are along the Bulgarian frontier at Rupel pass and east of there on the Nevrokop plateau. All this section was cut off by the German drive down the Vardar valley to Salonika.

German troops, the communique said, entered Salonika after delaying their advance Tuesday night in the Kilkis district to the north.

Broughton Barred Politics In Schools

Phillips Named President of State Association at Asheville Meeting

Asheville, April 5.—Governor Broughton told 3,000 delegates to the 57th convention of the North Carolina Education association today that "I shall not tolerate in my administration any political practices in the administration of public schools in North Carolina."

The governor spoke at the closing session of the convention shortly before the elevation of K. G. Phillips, of Winston-Salem, from the vice presidency to the presidency. He succeeded S. G. Hawfield, of Raleigh.

John C. Lockhart, formerly of Wake county but now superintendent of Mecklenburg county schools, was elected vice president.

Governor Broughton reviewed education's march of progress in North Carolina and pledged his administration to continuation of the movement.

"In this moment of great peril, when democracy is on trial throughout the world the duty of school teachers was never higher," he said. "We are not simply trying to improve democracy, we are trying to preserve it, and public education is an indispensable factor in this process."

Shook Hardware Store Is Opened

E. A. (Andy) Shook Establishes Business in Former Hadley Location

E. A. (Andy) Shook, well experienced hardware dealer, has established the Shook Hardware company with a well stocked store in the former location of Hadley Hardware company on Main street.

The store is well stocked with new hardware throughout and is now open for business.

Thirty-five years ago the late J. W. Shook entered in the hardware business in what was then the Wilkes Hardware and Furniture company. In 1916 the late J. R. Marlow purchased an interest in the firm and it operated for 14 years as Marlow-Shook Hardware company until Mr. Shook, father of E. A. (Andy) Shook, purchased the Marlow interests.

A few years ago Hadley Hardware company established in the same location and operated until recently.

The stock of general hardware, carpenter tools, farming tools, paints and varnishes, roofing, fencing, sporting goods, fishing tackle and many other items is completely new. The overhead of the company, Mr. Shook said, is low and makes it possible for him to sell hardware of quality at low prices.

Mr. Shook will be pleased to greet the many with whom he has carried on business transactions in his business career here and cordially invites all to visit his new place of business.

Food Sale April 12

The Fidelis class of the Wilkesboro Baptist church is sponsoring a food sale Saturday, the twelfth, at Newton's Drug Store in Wilkesboro. The sale begins at ten o'clock.

THE JOURNAL-PATRIOT

12 PAGES
Section One

VOL. XXXIV, No. 5

Published Mondays and Thursdays NORTH WILKESBORO, N. C. THURSDAY, APR. 10, 1941 $1.50 In the State — $3.00 Out of State

North Wilkesboro Junior Chamber of Commerce Formed

Temporary Organization Set Up Wednesday Night; Meet Again Tuesday

Junior Chamber of Commerce in North Wilkesboro was formed in a meeting at the city hall Wednesday night when a temporary organization was set up to serve during the organization period.

Heading this organization are W. O. Absher, chairman, and I. H. McNeill, Jr., secretary-treasurer.

Members of the Lenoir Jaycees here last night to assist in setting up an organization here were Tom Broughton, Dal Greer and Bill Wall, officers of the Lenoir club.

A committee to draw up a constitution and to make application to the state and national organizations for a charter is composed of Chairman Absher, Fred Hubbard, Jr., and Barney Arthur.

The chairman appointed a membership committee composed of Richard Johnston, James E. Caudill and Hadley Hayes. It will be the duty of this committee to list prospective members and all young men between ages of 21 and 35, inclusive, who wish to become charter members of the Jaycees here are asked to get in touch with a member of the committee as soon as possible and to be present at the next meeting, which will be held at the city hall on Tuesday night, April 15, 7:30 o'clock.

It was voted in the meeting last night that the membership fee, which will cover cost of securing the charter and the first quarterly dues to the state and national organizations, will be only one dollar per member. The question of membership dues was discussed and left open until the permanent organization is formed, although it was suggested that one dollar per month per member, payable quarterly, would be sufficient.

Live At Home Plan Will Be Stressed In Wilkes County

Workers Council To Be Organized; Meeting Called For April 17th

J. B. Snipes, Wilkes farm agent, has announced that a Workers' Council will be formed to promote the live at home program in Wilkes county and that a meeting will be held April 17 for that purpose.

The statement and announcement issued by the county agent follows:

"We have been advised by the state office that, due to the fact that agriculture is facing a critical situation, and also recognizing that this is not wholly a war condition but a situation that will cause constant and careful attention long after the war has ended; that a Workers Council should be organized in each county in the state to meet monthly.

"It is thought that such a council will further coordinate and unify our thinking and activities throughout the state. One of the first things to come before a newly organized council, according to John W. Goodman, Extension Assistant Director, and Miss Ruth Current, State Home Demonstration agent, will be a State-wide live-at-home program being sponsored jointly by the Governor of the state and the agricultural agencies."

"Our meeting has been set for Thursday, April 17, at 9:30 a. m. in the county courthouse. The following agencies have a special invitation to attend this meeting and any others who are especially interested in working with rural people: white and negro workers, both men and women, in the Extension Service, Vocational Education, FSA, SCS, FCA, AAA committees, president of home demonstration council, Grange, Farm Bureau and Land-Use Planning committees."

"A representative from the Extension Service will be present at this meeting."

"Keep edged tools sharp."

Rules Jugoslavia

Seventeen-year-old King Peter of Yugoslavia, who assumed power from his pro-Nazi ministers, and ascended the throne in a bloodless coup d'etat.

Commissioners Draw Jurors for Next Term Court

Judge Phillips to Preside Over Term Beginning Monday, April 28th

Wilkes county board of commissioners in April session with all members present transacted routine business. The board is composed of M. F. Absher, Max Foster and V. T. Walsh.

One item of business of public interest was a motion, which was passed unanimously, for the county to furnish one-half the cost of drill uniforms for the Home Guard company at North Wilkesboro provided that the town of North Wilkesboro appropriated the funds for the remaining half the cost. Drill uniforms, costing $3.95 each, are not furnished by the state or federal government.

The commissioners also drew jurors for the term of court to begin on Monday, April 28. Judge F. Donald Phillips is slated to preside over the term, which will be for trial of civil cases. Jurors were drawn for the term by the commissioners as follows:

First Week
Vernon Church, Stanton; J. G. Earp, Wilkesboro; J. E. DeJournette, Traphill; A. E. Moore and W. J. Moore, Brushy Mountain; J. I. Elledge, Mulberry; Lonnie Carter, Edwards; J. B. Mathis, New Castle; George Bangorner, North Wilkesboro; Cleve Anderson, Brushy Mountain; Frank Huffman, Union; Adam Bowlin, Union; Lester Luffman, Edwards; R. C. Whitley, Rock Creek; O. O. Aisher, Mulberry; J. S. Gray, New Castle; H. M. Phillips, Wilkesboro; T. L. Spears, Union; S. C. Ellis, Walnut Grove; J. A. Owens, Reddies River; M. D. Brown, Walnut Grove; E. Jones Ester, Brushy Mountain; Clyde Hinshaw, Edwards; D. F. Coffey, Rock Creek; C. F. Brown, Traphill; M. C. Sheets, Union; D. A. Holman, Somers.

Second Week
Tyre Byrd, Edwards; J. P. Mitchell, Somers; J. F. Lyon, Traphill; J. H. Haynes, Mulberry; Edward Luffman, Edwards; M. N. Plunk, Edwards; M. P. Mastin, New Castle; Walter M. Morrison, Edwards; J. C. Tedder, Brushy Mountain; Jessie Cleary, Union; Cecil Kibby, Reddies River; S. V. Staley, Wilkesboro; A. D. Cheek, Traphill; Spurkeon Gentry, Edwards; I. A. Walsh, Elk; Thomas Perry, Union; D. L. Holbrook, Walnut Grove; J. B. Pardue, Edwards; J. S. Hayes, North Wilkesboro; W. E. Holbrook, Walnut Grove; R. B. Snyder, Reddies River; Connie Owens, North Wilkesboro; Parks Gregory, New Castle; James I. Woods, Reddies River; R. H. Johnson, Wilkesboro; I. N. Prevette, Somers.

Sale Easter Eggs

The Civic and Social Club, of North Wilkesboro, will sponsor a sale of Easter eggs at Spainhour, Snyder's Store Saturday, the twelfth. Eggs will be on sale all during the day, and any one wishing special orders will please call Mrs. A. C. Chamberlain or Mrs. Hadley Hayes.

Greatest Path—To Your Church

By JOHN W. KINCHELOE, Jr. (Pastor First Baptist Church)

"The greatest path in the world is the path from your door to the door of your church. If all of us faithfully used this path and were guided by its radiant influence, the nation would be safe, crimes subside, business prosper, and all hearts have peace. For this path was made by the Son of Man for the sons of men, that walking humbly into His holy presence in the church, we might afterward walk together as brethren in the world. Are you using this greatest path?" This quotation, appearing in a recent church bulletin, voices a conviction which is very real to many Christian people today.

Someone may say, however, "I do not need the church. Why should I go to church to worship God? I can worship Him elsewhere." It is true that God can be worshipped anywhere—at a home, store, shop, or in the fields—but the regular attendance of millions of people at services of worship in Christian churches throughout the world gives convincing token and testimony of the vital place and importance of church worship. Suppose the blazing coals in a fireplace could speak. Maybe one of them would say, "I can burn just as brightly and give off just as much heat to this room if I were removed from the rest of these coals and placed out there on the hearth all by myself." If, indeed, this piece of coal was lifted from its fellows in the blazing fire-place and placed on the cold hearthstone all to itself, what would happen? It would burn brightly for only a few minutes. Soon its light would begin to glimmer and its warmth would be left but a smoldering ember. Now, with the tongue, which is smoldering and smoking coal and put it back among the others in the fire-place. The contagious heat and light of the fire causes the coal to burst into warm flame again, and give forth its normal light and heat to the room. This is a picture of what happens to many a person who forsakes the church and its worship services. The spiritual life cools off, and there is only a spark of the former interest and fervor left. But, by a strong resolve, let this person return to regular worship at the church and congenial fellowship with church-going people. The result is nearly invariably the same. His life will discover a new radiance of outlook, and in his heart there will be kindled a new warmth of fellowship toward others.

A recent writer has expressed the human necessity for Sunday worship as follows: "The proper use of Sunday for worship and rest is as necessary to right living as nourishing food or the proper cleanliness. The laws of health, the laws of happiness and peace and the laws of God require one day in seven for worship and rest, for rebuilding tired muscles, depleted nerves, and refurbishing moral power. The heart of man, soiled through contact with worldly things of life, needs the cleansing influence of Christian worship. The most beneficial way to worship God is by joining in the church service."

Dr. Henry C. Link, author of "The Return to Religion," one of the best sellers among recent non-fiction books, says in his book that he stayed away from church for many years of his life. In his clinical work, however, as a psycho-analyst, he was called upon to advise treatment for hundreds of people who were conscious of personal discontent, unhappiness, fear, weakness, and general loss of interest in life. As a physician, in assisting such people to a happier adjustment to life, he found that among his practical suggestions to patients for overcoming psychological peculiarities and unhappiness he was invariably recommending that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services—his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a church and attend Sunday school and worship services, his purpose, of course, being to enlarge the circle of their interests and to get them to think in terms of others' interests of self. He finally realized that he was guilty of a great inconsistency in life—he was advocating to his patients that they join a