Wine Laboratory Wanted by Caffey

John W. Caffey, Director of the North Carolina Association for Wine Control, today announced that he has petitioned the Governor to make an appropriation out of the Contingency and Emergency Fund to create a laboratory for the purpose of testing and analyzing samples of wines offered for sale in this State.

Caffey said that he has had a conference with the Governor regarding the testing of wines.

Director Caffey, who is attempting to "clean up" the Wine Industry in North Carolina, pointed-out that with the outlawing of fortified wines, he is apprehensive of abuses of the sale of 10 per cent wines which may be adulterated or of a synthetic character and not of the genuine type made from the natural fermentation of fruits or berries, without the addition of foreign substance.

It was learned that Caffey has also conferred with Cutler Moore, Chairman of the ABC Board, and Mr. Moore has pledged the cooperation of the Board in the wine control program in making such tests and analysis if the funds for same can be made available.

The 1940 lettuce acreage harvested of 2,300 acres was a record for the State, reports the N. C. Department of Agriculture.

"THE DEVIL AND MISS JONES"

Robert Cummings and Jean Arthur rest on the sands after a day at the shore, in this scene from "The Devil and Miss Jones", in which Miss Arthur is starred by EKO Radio. Bob has the featured romantic role in support, with Charles Coburn and Spring Byington also heavily featured. Norman Krasna wrote the piece, a laugh-padded story of Working people in a big city of today! "The Devil and Miss Jones" opens at the Allen Thursday.

Nitrogen Capacity Meeting Called Adequate For All Demands So Far

Raleigh, June 10.—A conference of farmers, agricultural leaders, manufacturers, dealers and farm organization representatives will be held June 16 to suggest the grades of mixed fertilizers to be sold in North Carolina, D. S. Coltrane, assistant to the Commissioner of Agriculture announced today.

Not less than 35 nor more than 50 grades of fertilizer will be approved for sale in the state in conformity with the 1941 fertilizer law enacted by the General Assembly. Final adoption of the grades will be made by the State Board of Agriculture and the director of the N. C. Experiment Station.

The conference will be held in the board room of the Agricultural building here at 10:30 a. m. Coltrane, who will discuss the provisions of the fertilizer act, explained that "the purpose of the meeting will be to obtain from all interested persons a definite view as to the grades of fertilizer needed in a sound agricultural program."

"Much confusion has resulted in the past because of the unnecessarily large number of fertilizer grades sold in the State and the provision of the law providing for grade reduction will be of substantial benefit to farmers," he added. The N. C. Experiment Station recognizes approximately 22 grades of fertilizer as sufficient to meet plant food requirements of soils in the State. Dr. L. D. Baver, head of the State College Agronomy department, will discuss the recommended grades of the Experiment Station.

An explanation of the new North Carolina lime law will also be a feature of the conference. Use the advertising columns of this paper as your shopping guide.

Industries Making Dreams Come True

Plants Will Soon Be Turning Out Over 10,000 Plane Engines A Week

Cleveland, June 9.—Ten thousand and airplane engines, 400 high tanks, 300 anti-aircraft guns and 240 medium tanks a month. Five thousand light buggies a week. Two hundred scout cars a day.

These figures may sound like day-dreams on a general's doodle pad, but newborn American war industries are making them come true. Give them a little time and these new factories will produce as much as any handful of other nations put together, their managers say. Yet they'll need the time.

A trip through the guarded gates of the factories and a talk with the engineers who designed them shows the how and why. With other returned war correspondents I have gone through key defense factories in five states with army and navy officers as guides.

On such sites as a former cornfield near Detroit, a tobacco farm near Hartford, Conn., and a pasture on the outskirts of Indianapolis I saw engine, tank and airplane factories being started, finished or getting into production. On the desks of industrialists from the eastern seaboard to the midwest I saw plans for still more factories.

Everyone Confident
Everyone with whom I talked—army officer, engineer, production chief, draftsman, or mechanic—was confident that this country eventually could turn out more and better equipment than all of continental Europe put together.

The men who knew most about European plants—such as R. K. Evans, sturdy, gray-haired General Motors vice president who manufactured automobiles in Germany from 1926 to 1936 and who showed me through the Allison airplane engine factory in Indianapolis—expressed even more confidence in American production capacity than the others.

"The Germans make good machines," Evans said. "And they have a saved-year start on us. But we can match them at any thing that's made. The way I see it our war production right now is like Boonville dam. We're building the dam—the factories. It's just starting to back up water. When we get it finished and when the power starts to come out there's going to be a roar bigger than anyone ever heard or imagined—anywhere, anytime." Evans said Allison was producing 400 engines a month now and aiming at 1,000 a month by early next year.

"How long would it take us to double that?" he continued. "Well, if everything went our way, I should say about 300 days."

Business men expect the general run of manufactured grocery products to begin reflecting the higher raw materials and labor costs in early fall when this year's crops have been processed and moved.

The average rate of egg production per layer for April, 1941, was 28.28 eggs per week with 15.77 eggs per bird during April of last year, reports the State Department of Agriculture.
