45,000 PEOPLE GONE MAD

On Saturday 45,000 people will crowd into the big horseshoe stadium at Duke University to see two bunches of men scramble over a little raised piece of asphalt. Think of that—more people than there are in Wilkes county will gather at one place to see 11 men on a side try to carry a odd shaped ball over a line. To see them scramble, you'd think the fate of the nation depended on getting that ball across a certain line.

Forty-five thousand will pay up to $2.75 each to see that go on.

And they will sit on hard boards bolted down to harder concrete.

The weather may be cold or wet, but that won't make any difference.

Silly, isn't it?

Yet we'd like very much to be one of the 45,000 people gone mad.

ONE POINT VERY CLEAR

The very gracious letter we received from Governor Broughton appointing us to serve on the Unemployment Compensation advisory board here was very definite on one point—that no pay was attached to the job.

We inquired around to find out a little of what the whole thing is about and found out little.

The brand new tune selected by Guy Lombardo for Hit Parade Honors this week is "The Sun Is Shining Brighter," as smooth a tune as ever chased the blues away. You get the complete words and music free in Sunday's Washington Times-Herald, now on sale.

Women Of The Moose Celebrates Book Week Here

(BY VIRGINIA SNOW)

Senior Regent Mrs. Victor Gaddy, of the North Wilkesboro chapter No. 476 of the Women of the Moose, announces her organization's participation in the annual National Book Week celebration of National Book Week. The chapter celebration was in charge of which Mrs. Mazie Church is chairman.

Co-worker Virginia Smart announced the program, the special feature of the evening being an interesting talk by Mrs. Mazie Church on the origin and significance of National Book Week, which in substance was as follows:

"Henry Ward Beecher knew the true value of books and of their chief channel of distribution—the Library—when he said 'A library is not a luxury, but one of the necessities of life.' It was because books were considered 'necessities of life' that Book Week was inaugurated to emphasize and establish their importance in the minds of the people.

National Book Week, which is celebrated the second week of November each year, originated in the mind of Franklin K. Matthews, chief librarian of the Boy Scouts of America. Mr. Matthews interested other librarians in the idea of devoting a particular seven day period of each year to stressing books for boys. The project met with immediate success but the question was eventually raised as to why girls were excluded. There being no justification, Boys' Book Week became children's Book Week.

The Women of the Moose adopted their library program in 1930. Thus, what was first known as Boys' Book Week and then Children's Book Week, has become National Book Week as it carried its message to all people with no distinction of sex, age, or condition of education.

The Women of the Moose have exemplified the objectives of National Book Week in all the activities of the Library committee. They are constantly striving to lead mankind to the world through their efforts to build an adequate library at Mooseheart; to encourage more reading of books among their membership, and the general public; and promote at the same time the resources of their local library.

No organization is to be found with greater objectives or with more good deeds to broadcast, as it celebrates National Book Week than the Women of the Moose who have contributed over 20,000 books to the general libraries at Mooseheart; placed thousands of additional books in local, county and state institutions of all descriptions.

The month of November with Book Week on the calendar of every chapter adds a new incentive to our daily activities of "carrying Mooseheart Standards into our homes; and communities." The Book Week slogan—"Books to Grow on," gives our organizations a wonderful opportunity to carry out the objects set forth by National Book Week.

Before adjourning the chapter voted to send a book to Mooseheart as its contribution during Book Week. Senior Regent Gaddy announced that the local men lodge had signified an interest in participating in the Book Shower for Mooseheart and they plan to send a book contribution to the "City of Childhood."
