"Tombstone" Epic of the Great West

Lovely Frances Gifford furnishes the love interest in Paramount's new western epic "TOMBSTONE," showing at the Liberty Monday and Tuesday.

For the locale and inspiration of "Tombstone," Paramount has turned back the pages of history of the lawless West to the days when the Arizona territory was over-run by bandits, cattle rustlers and cut-throats and when a court of law dear old justice in the saloon. With producer Harry Sherman and director William McGann at the helm, and with such well-known troupers as Richard Dix, Edgar Buchanan, Kent Taylor and Victor Jory in feature roles, the film emerges as an entertaining Western, expertly photographed. Tombstone will be showing at the Liberty Monday and Tuesday.

Was In Distress Day and Night Says Grocer

Had To Give Up Farm And Move To Town. Retonga Brings Relief After Everything Else He Tried Had Failed.

Giving Retonga full credit for relieving distress that had resisted every other means tried, Mr. E. A. Hargett, well known grocer of 724 E. 18th St., Charlotte, adds his name to the hundreds here praising this famous stomachic and Vitamin B-1 medicine. Discussing his case, Mr. Hargett declared:

"Sour, gassy indigestion tortured me until I had to give up my farm. Often gas accumulated in my stomach until I would draw double with pain. I was too nervous and uncomfortable at night to get much rest, and mornings I felt so miserable and weak that doing my farm work was out of the question. I lost weight and strength, my elimination was terribly sluggish, and much of the time I ached and hurt all over."

"The way Retonga relieved all this distress was one of my happiest experiences. It's a joy to be able to eat again without fear. My nerves have settled down. I sleep peacefully, and the aching, hurting feeling in my muscles is relieved. I feel better than in years. Mrs. Hargett is taking Retonga, too, now, and she joins me in saying that it is the best medicine we ever had in our home."

MR. E. A. HARGETT

Such grateful evidence speaks for itself. Accept no substitute. Retonga may be obtained in North Wilkesboro at Horton's Drug Store, and in Wilkesboro at Newton's Drug Store. Adv.
