Local Men Helped To Wipe Out Japs

J. C. Miller, Jr., sent to his parents the above picture of some Japanese marines which were on the Solomon islands when the U. S. Marine units in which he and Max Kilby, also of this city, are serving, won a great victory. The letter was written by Miller to his parents as the Marines were mopping up the remaining Japs. The above picture was "looted" by Miller and sent to his parents as a souvenir.

J. C. Miller, Jr., and Max Kilby Fight In Solomon Islands

At least two Wilkes men, J. C. Miller, Jr., and Max Kilby, both of North Wilkesboro, were among the gallant U. S. Marines who cleaned the Japs from the Solomon islands in the South Pacific.

First direct word from any Wilkes men in the brave groups who literally annihilated the Japs on the islands was contained in a letter received this week by Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Miller, from their son, J. C., Jr., who said that he was "alive and kicking", but regretted to state that many of his brave comrades were not. However, he said casualties among the Marines were few in view of the fact that they were the invading force.

Miller, whose part in the invasion of Tulagi island must have been a most active one, stated that he and Max Kilby, son of Mrs. and Mrs. C. C. Kilby, of North Wilkesboro, went through the battles together without injury.

In the letter he enclosed a picture of some Jap Marines which he said he "looted" and sent to his parents as a souvenir.

Text of the letter by Miller follows:

"After fierce sporadic fighting for the last few days, I am thankful to say I am still 'alive and kicking,' although with regret I say some of my brave comrades aren't. Regardless, I'm positive our casualties are comparatively few, considering we were the invading force.

"All the credit cannot be given our land forces, however, because the navy and air force played a spectacular role. Without their cooperation this would have been impossible.

"Excuse the suspense but as you probably suspected I am in the Solomon islands in the south Pacific.

"The island we took first was named 'Tulagi.' We are proud to say this operation took only 48 hours or less, and on very difficult terrain, infested with natural fortifications, such as caves, tunnels, underbrush and hills, etc.

"We are now on 'Guadalcanal Island' on mopping up operations, which up to now hasn't been very strenuous because we are being held for reserves.

"Now that I've given you a 'deleted' survey of what happened in first large scale offensive of the U. S., I'll now get down to personal matters.

"I just had a word with Max Kilby and he told me to tell you he would appreciate it if you would tell his folks he is very busy now and will be until after the mail goes but that we went through the battle together and he's still in A-1 shape and hopes everyone home is the same.

"I looted a picture of some Jap marines which we fought here and am sending it to you for a souvenir.

"Wishing you and all health and happiness until a prospective near future, will close. Always a loving son."

Jack Reynolds Killed Robert Nicholson With Stones Tuesday

Jack Reynolds, of this city, was ordered held without bond Wednesday for the slaying of Robert Nicholson at the Nicholson home in the Joynes community Tuesday afternoon.

Coroner I. M. Myers ordered Reynolds held after evidence was waived to court.

Nicholson died in the hospital at Elkin Tuesday night, several hours after he received head injuries in the fight with Reynolds.

Coroner Myers said reports he had received were to the effect that Reynolds went to the home of Nicholson to get some liquor and started a fight with Nicholson after obtaining a small quantity of brandy. Reynolds is said to have thrown Nicholson's gun out of the window and when Nicholson ran to get the gun Reynolds grabbed some rocks and struck Nicholson on the head, inflicting the injuries which proved fatal. These reports by Nicholson's wife were corroborated by reports given by John S. McGrady, another eye witness, Coroner Myers said.

Nicholson was 39 years of age, a native of North Carolina and Mrs. J. W. Nicholson, of Traphill. Surviving is his widow, Mrs. Rosalee Nicholson, three children, Estel Mae, Betty Irene and Mary Della, his mother and mother, three brothers and four sisters.
