

North Wilkesboro Wins In Softball

Inter City Series Is Being Played

Long rivalry in sports events is being renewed between North Wilkesboro and Wilkesboro this week as picked teams from the churches' softball league are playing an inter-city series of three best out of five.

North Wilkesboro team won the games Monday and Tuesday evenings but the Wilkesboro players offered strong competition. The game Monday was unusually fast and four flashing double plays helped North Wilkesboro to win five to three. Watson and Snipes led in hitting with three each for North Wilkesboro while Garwood hit three for Wilkesboro.

On Tuesday another close game was played with North Wilkesboro taking a ten to eight decision. Eller led the North Wilkesboro team with three hits and Linney and Bouchelle led the Wilkesboro players with two each.

The remaining games will be played on the Wilkesboro field, beginning promptly at 6:15 instead of 6:30 as formerly.

Rev. Charles E. Shannon Is Heard By Methodist Tuesday Evening

The Brotherhood organization of the North Wilkesboro Methodist church heard a short, interesting talk by Rev. Charles E. Shannon at its regular monthly meeting held in the church hut Tuesday evening. Rev. Mr. Shannon, of Monroe, is the new pastor of the Wilkesboro and Union Methodist churches.

In the course of his brief talk, Rev. Mr. Shannon developed the thought that much material progress has been made in the world during the past 100 years, but that Christian people are challenged with the question whether or not spiritual progress has kept the pace with the material.

Mr. R. E. Gibbs, Jr., is president of the brotherhood, and Messrs. W. D. Halfacre and W. E. Jones were program chairmen for the meeting, which was well attended.

Julius C. Hubbard was a guest of Mr. Halfacre at the meeting and presented Rev. Mr. Shannon to the membership of the Brotherhood.

Current Issue Popular Government Gives Rulings In Answer To Requests

Attorney General Harry McMullan recently gave two rulings in answer to requests by Wilkes people.

A ruling that all qualified electors, may vote absentee when they comply with provisions of the state law was given in answer to a request by N. B. Smithy, chairman of the Wilkes Republican Executive committee. Text of the Attorney General's ruling as given in the current issue of Popular Government follows:

To N. B. Smithy, Inquiry: May voters away from home, on defense work, vote by absentee ballot?

(A.G.) Under the provisions of Chapter 159, Public Laws of 1939, absentee voting is permitted in general elections to all qualified electors, including soldiers, and to those engaged in doing defense work away from home.

Answering a request by W. P. Kelly, North Wilkesboro clerk and treasurer, relative to state highway patrolman's fees, the Attorney General gave the following ruling:

To W. P. Kelly, Inquiry: What disposition should be made of fees of State Highway Patrolmen for arrests and serving subpoenas, when they are collected from defendants in criminal cases?

(A.G.) Section 3346 (f) of Michie's 1939 Code provides that "all fees for arrests or service of process that may be taxed in the bill of costs for the various courts of the State on account of the State Highway Patrol shall be remitted to the general fund in the county in which said cost is taxed."

Are You a Waster Kitchen Grease?

Pouring dynamite down the drain. That's what you're doing every time you throw away drippings from your frying pan and broilers. Clogging up the war and your drains at the same time.

You have a new assignment now. You're careful with sugar. You've turned in your old rubber goods. You walk to save gasoline and tires. Next on the list are fats and oils.

Fats are essential war material. Here's why: We get glycerine from grease. Glycerine is needed to make explosives. Two pounds of grease produce enough glycerine to make dynamite for five rounds of anti-aircraft fire.

The Navy needs glycerine too, for floating ship compasses and for steering gears. Instead of oil, because glycerine doesn't harden easily or evaporate. It is used on anti-aircraft guns, too, and on anti-aircraft equipment.

American housewives, the experts' claim, have been wasting 2 billion pounds of cooking fat a year. There's enough dynamite in all that fat to bomb many a Nazi stronghold.

You use glycerine in lots of things. It's in face creams, ointments, and many kinds of cosmetics; it soothes the skin, makes lipsticks creamy, keeps them free from germs. That pipeful of tobacco your husband enjoys has glycerine in it to stop the mixture from spilling and drying out, to give it a sweet taste.

Doctors need glycerine. It is an ideal antiseptic. It softens dead tissues in wounds, sterilizes instruments and rubber gloves.

Mouth washes have glycerine in them; so do shoe polish, and antifeeze. It keeps imitation leather supple and smooth. It serves as a lubricant in weaving rayon fabrics. You'll find glycerine in soap, paper, perfume, photographic film, and innumerable other common everyday products.

You can see we need a lot of glycerine. Normally we import about a billion and a half pounds of fats and oils—many of them from areas involved in the war. Now imports from the Pacific areas are largely cut off. It's up to the women of America to get all the grease out of their frying pans and broilers and get all of it that is not usable as food into the hands of manufacturers who can extract the glycerine from it. You can't extract glycerine at home. That's why your government doesn't ask you to make soap out of your unused fats.

In Chicago housewives have been experimenting in the salvage of fats and oils for the past few months, and now the rest of the country is joining the campaign.

A half-tablespoon of bacon drippings seems infinitesimal but you'd be surprised how it adds up in a month's time. Get out a clean coffee can and cover it with a clean piece of cheesecloth, double thickness. Pour your drippings through the cloth, and put the can in the icebox, to keep the grease from becoming rancid. Rancidity in grease cuts down the amount of glycerine that can be extracted.

When the coffee can is full take it to your grocer or butcher. He'll weigh it, and pay you for the grease. You'll find that a 1-pound coffee can holds about 2 pounds of grease.

Don't save the drippings in a glass jar or paper container. The coffee can of grease will be sent, as is, to the rendering plant. The glass jars might break and paper cups smash. So remember about using old metal containers.

If you don't intend to use any salvaged grease for cooking, pour all kinds into the coffee can—bacon, lamb, beef, and so on. It doesn't make any difference to the rendering plant. If you are saving fats to use in your cooking you should use individual containers for each kind of fat. You will use bacon grease for frying liver, eggs, or meats; you'll use it on wilted lettuce and for shortening—one-half bacon grease and one-half butter is an old trick in making delicious brownies.

Chicken and duck fats are good spread on bread. They make fine shortening, flavoring, and can be used for frying.

The more waste fat you use in cooking, the less you'll have to buy, and the less fat will have to be diverted from war uses to consumer uses. Also, you'll be saving money.

When families without telephones in a Nebraska community want anything in town, they hang a red flag on the gatepost or mailbox, and obliging neighbors driving by will stop to pick up the order.
