Among the unsung heroes of the war list the mine killers of the Royal Canadian navy. An offshoot of England's famous mine disposal squad, these men who flirt with death pick this job voluntarily and receive no "extras." Their job is to round up mines and render them harmless. The gentleman at the left who is "reughing up" a floating mine with an ice pick is Lient. George Rundle, instructor at a Canadian port, After roughing, the mine is set after with gasoline-soaked rags and blown up. Right: Lieutenant Rundle, with assistant Harold Simpson, tows a mine towards shore after Rundle had removed the horns Mr. Worth Sale is building a that actuate the detonator.
