VICTORY GARDEN DISPLAY

The attention of the public is called to the Victory Garden display in the window of Jenkins Hardware company.

The First Baptist church of North Wilkesboro will begin its annual series of evangelistic services on Monday evening of next week, April 5, with Dr. R. Paul Caudill, pastor of the First Baptist church in Augusta, Ga., as the guest preacher for the meeting. Services will be held each evening, except Saturday, at 7:30 p. m. The meeting is scheduled to continue through Friday, April 16th.

Dr. Caudill formerly lived in North Wilkesboro, and is well known to the people of Wilkes county. His theological studies were conducted principally at the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary in Louisville, Kentucky, where he recently received the doctorate degree. Dr. Caudill's father and mother, Rev. and Mrs. C. M. Caudill, reside at Hays. Dr. Paul Caudill preached the Baccalaureate sermon for the graduating class of the North Wilkesboro high school in 1941.

Preparations for the meeting have been underway for the past several weeks. Home prayer meetings have been conducted at a number of homes in the community, and various organizations in the church are making plans to help further the spiritual purposes of the meeting.

help further the spiritual purposes of the meeting.

Mrs. Andrew F. Kilby, director of music at the First Baptist church, is planning special music for the various services, and will direct the choir. Miss Ruby Blackburn, the church organist, will be the accompanist. The congregations are urged to come to the church early each evening and take part in the congregational singing of gospel hymns and songs. Young people are invited to sit with the young people's choir each evening.

A wide interest has been manifested in the meeting, not only among Baptists but also among others who have been acquainted with the visiting minister for years. Large congregations are expected at the services each evening. The opening service on Monday evening is being advertised as a "Welcome Home" service, and friends of the speaker are urged to be present to welcome Dr. Caudill back to his home town and county.

and Mrs. S. V. Tomlinson, said. Lieut. Tomlinson was a bomber pilot and was in North Africa at the time he wrote the last letter home.

He volunteered for the army air corps while in school at the university of North Carolina and entered training on December 10, 1941. He graduated from aviation cadet school in June, 1942, at Stockton, California, and received his commission as a lieutenant.

Lieut. Tomlinson left the United States about two months ago, flying a bomber to Africa.

Red Cross Field Directors Solve Soldiers' Problems

Thousands of U. S. fighting men last year accepted the invitation to discuss their personal problems with Red Cross field directors who accompany troops to all parts of the world. This picture, taken in London, shows everyone happy after the field men had satisfactorily solved the problems of two soldiers at the desk. Contributions to the Red Cross 1943 War Fund, now in progress, make this service possible.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The soldier stormed into the Red Cross office at a southern Army camp. His mouth was set in a hard, straight line; his eyes were cold, determined. His wife trailed him as he strode across the reception room; her face was red and swollen from crying. They were not over 22.

"I need help," the soldier told the Red Cross field director at the desk. "And I need it fast."

The Red Cross field director smiled, but the soldier did not return it. "All right, soldier, let's see what's the trouble."

"If I don't get help I'm going over the hill," he blurted. "I'm on alert now—due to move out almost any minute. But I'm not going—and leave my wife with no place to stay."

Further conversation developed that the young bride was an expectant mother. She was unable to go home because of her stepfather. Her husband had no relatives with whom she could stay. And the allotment he had made to his wife had not yet come through.

Two hours later—after much conversation and planning—the soldier was shaking the hand of the Red Cross field director.

The Red Cross man had arranged that the soldier's wife spend the night at the Army camp guest house. Preparations had been completed with a nearby Red Cross chapter for her transportation back home. The Red Cross chapter in the girl's home town had agreed to see that she had proper care until the baby was born. By that time the allotment would be coming through.

In every United States military establishment, at home and abroad, the American Red Cross maintains a field director and staff to "help Uncle Sam's fighting men work out such personal problems. More than 1,000,000 servicemen passed through the offices of the Red Cross field directors last year. Their problems covered all phases of life—families needing financial aid, allotments, illnesses, deaths, loss of contact with the home folks. These and other problems are unfolded in a never-ending panorama before Red Cross field directors. Almost always they are solved.

The Red Cross field director is ready to furnish information, counsel, and assistance as needed to men of the armed forces. Reaching into every county in the United States through local Red Cross chapters, these workers and local home service chairman act on behalf of the men of the armed forces and their families in matters affecting the welfare of either or both.

In addition to the servicemen aided by field directors, more than 500,000 families of men in the service received help through Red Cross chapters and branches.

Contributions of the American people to the Red Cross during the $125,000,000 War Fund appeal now in progress will help to keep and expand these services to the nation's fighting men.

Varied and often unusual are the other demands made of Red Cross field directors. Field Director William Fluharty, stationed in a remote Australian area, traveled down to a railroad junction to bring back 6,000 pounds of American magazines for troops to which he was assigned. Returning on a train, he was asked to help deliver a baby for a native woman, belatedly en route to a hospital.

Red Cross Field Director Albert S. Campbell and two assistants, David S. Oman and John J. Clancy, Jr., distributed clothes, cigarettes, soap, razors, tooth brushes, playing cards and other articles to American fighters during one of the most furious Solomon Islands battles.

Whatever the welfare and personal problems of American fighters at home or abroad, the field director, backed up by 2,255 Red Cross chapters and 6,000 branches, is the serviceman's best friend in time of need.
