

Ford Philosophizes On Eve of Birthday

Detroit, July 28.—Henry Ford who will observe his 80th birthday anniversary tomorrow in excellent health and as optimistic as ever, asserted today that business and industry "must build the physical basis of the good society."

And, added, business and industrial effort must be developed around the philosophy that the only real benefit is the general benefit.

"There must be more and more"

NOTICE OF SALE OF LAND

By virtue of the power of sale contained in a certain deed of trust executed on the 5th day of August, 1931, to A. H. Casey, Trustee, by Lizzie Hackett and L. J. Hackett, and registered in book 165 at page 122; the said deed of trust being to secure a certain note, which said note is past due and unpaid, the demand having been made upon the Executrix of the Trustee for the payment of said note, the undersigned, as Executrix of the estate of A. H. Casey, deceased, will offer for sale at public auction at the Courthouse door, at Wilkesboro, N. C., to the highest bidder for cash, on the 21st day of August, 1943, at 12:00 Noon, the following described lands, lying and being in Lewis Fork township, Wilkes county, and described and defined as follows:

industry," Ford said. "It is essential to political and economic freedom, and anything that hinders industry is harmful to the American ideal."

Ford comes to his 80th birthday with heavier responsibilities than he has had in approximately a quarter century, but seemingly in the best health he has enjoyed at any time, and thoroughly able to carry on indefinitely. After a lapse of nearly 25 years, Ford took over again the presidency and general management of the Ford company following the death several weeks ago of his son, Edsel B. Ford.

"If I felt any better," he remarked, "I'd have to run."

His appearance supported that remark. Slender and alert, he moved with quick step; his handclasp was firm and his interest in current affairs and the future as keen as ever.

thence southeast down the dividing ridge to Lewis Fork creek; thence down the creek to an apple tree, thence a southeast course to the branch; thence up said branch to a black oak corner on the top of said ridge; thence with Foster's line a southwesterly course to Lewis Fork creek; thence up said creek to an ash tree; thence up said creek to the beginning, containing sixty acres, more or less. The above described land being all of the land belonging to the tract on which they now live.

investment of $25,000 four decades ago into an industrial empire that today has assets worth more than $800,000,000, stressed that his company has been able to do many things that needed to be done because it has been "free from all stockholders and financial control."

"We never made money our main object," he said. "We regarded it as one of the tools, one of the byproducts of business, and as a result we always found that we had enough."

"Money is just a result of a practical life—it saves time in exchanging goods—and is no good for anything else. People who desire to live off money, thinking that money is wealth, easily become parasites. We never believed that we could be prosperous alone. Real prosperity is prosperity for all."

Only industry, Ford said, can abolish poverty.

"It can give the only social security human beings can know—the security of being able to produce what they need," he added.

"I know of no better way to help my fellow man than to build more and more industry, linking farms and schools and all the arts to its general purpose," he said. "There is no better way for a young man to serve his generation than to get into the work of making industry a better builder of social values."

Ford said that until he started in business he "had no idea how completely American business was governed by the idea of making money."

"Some men even thought it was 'good business' to cut down production in order to increase profits," he said. "They believe in the theory that scarcity makes wealth. I could never understand it."

"Young Americans should know that there are two ways of doing business—one that makes money its master and one that makes money its servant. For 40 years, the latter has been my style of business, and I think it will be the only type of business that will succeed in the future."

Ford will spend his birthday tomorrow aboard one of the Ford ore carriers, en route with Mrs. Ford to his summer lodge in the Huron mountains on the shore of Lake Superior.

Midwest Angry At Gas Situation

Washington.—It was good news to "ordinary motorists" in the East that they may get more gasoline soon, but Secretary Ickes' statement that supplies in the Midwest and Southwest would be reduced proportionately was described by Senator Wherry, Republican of Nebraska, as angering the people there.

Ickes, as petroleum administrator, told his press conference he is confident Eastern supplies would be increased within a few weeks. But he made it plain this would be accompanied by an approximate equalization of allowances in sections east of the Rockies.

The outlook for the East was joyfully received by Representative Hatley, Republican of New Jersey, head of a group of eastern states congressmen who have been plugging for larger allowances and for removal of the pleasure driving ban. But Wherry returned here with word, "The people of the Midwest are up in arms" against equalization of Eastern and Midwestern supplies, reducing the latter.

In view of the widespread opposition, Wherry said, he believes the Senate special committee investigating the Midwest fuel situation should discuss the question at its Kansas City, Mo., meeting next week.

Wherry said he was informed the order would be effective August 15. Hatley predicted lifting of the Eastern pleasure driving ban "within ten days" with the value of "A" coupons raised "from 1-3 to 3 gallons" a week.

"All of the testimony thus far before our committee," Wherry stated, "shows that the only reason for rationing in the Midwest is the bottleneck of transportation to the East. If it's just a question of a bottleneck of transportation, then the proof of the pudding is that we don't need gasoline rationing out there where we have an abundance of gasoline."

Someone Needs You

If you're feeling sad and lonely. There seems nothing you can do. Just take courage and remember there is someone needing you. You were created for a purpose. For a part in God's Great Plan. Bear ye one another's burdens. So fulfill Christ's law to man.

Are you father, son or daughter? You've a work, none else can do. Are you husband, wife or mother? There is someone needing you. If perhaps in bed you're lying. You can smile or press the hand of the one who tells his story. He will know you understand.

There are many sad and lonely. And discouraged, not a few. Who a little cheer are needing. And there's someone needing you. Someone needs your faith and courage. Someone needs your love and prayer. Someone needs your inspiration. Thus to help their cross to bear.

Do not think your work is ended. There is much that you can do. And as long as you're on earth, There is someone needing you.

91,000 WAVES Wanted Soon

Washington.—Plans to swell the strength of the WAVES to 91,000 by the end of 1944 were announced today by the Navy, as it reported that the women's naval auxiliary, by taking over shore jobs, already has released enough officers and bluejackets to man a major task force.

Just a year old tomorrow, with the demand for their service multiplying and the variety of their assignments increasing, the WAVES now number 27,000, or nearly triple the enrollment anticipated by the Navy when President Roosevelt signed the act creating the organization July 30, 1942.

Admiral Ernest J. King, commander-in-chief of the U. S. fleet and chief of naval operations, summing up the measure of their achievement, said:

"The expectations of the Navy in you have been justified by your hard work and sincere dedication to duty. You who are members of the women's reserve have won the respect of the naval service by your acceptance of military requirements, readiness for responsibility, and already valuable contribution to the work of winning the war."

Of the 27,000 WAVES now on duty, about 10,000 are still in training. The largest group is on duty in Washington, with more than 3,000 officers and enlisted women billeted in the office of the commander in chief, U. S. fleet, and the chief of naval operations. Approximately 2,000 more are on duty in other offices of the Navy department.

Officers in charge of shore establishments, attaches assigned, are requesting more and more uniformed women for assignment in their offices.

When the women's reserve was established a year ago, plans called for 1,000 officers and 10,000 enlisted women.

Today, the 16 training schools for enlisted women and the naval reserve midshipmen's school for officers have a combined capacity for training more than that number at one time, the Navy says, adding:

"What was originally planned to be mostly an office force has expanded into gunnery and blind flying instruction, aerology, aviation ground crew work, navigation, and other fields.

"In addition, there are large numbers serving in Navy communications, one of the first fields in which it was recognized that trained women could replace Navy men. Other large numbers are also doing office work, and, in time to come, they will probably replace all enlisted men serving in such billets at shore stations in continental United States."

In 18 months 17,000 workers have been recruited to increase Hatt's strategic agricultural materials for war use.

Apollo got the Glory ...the Vitamins did the work. Fortunately, we do not have to depend upon the whims of an Apollo for safeguards for our health. Science has demonstrated over and over again that sensible living and proper nutrition are the first steps toward a robust body and an alert mind. The entire nation looks eagerly for news about Science's continuous studies of vitamins. One fact that has been determined is that the B Complex vitamins are the least plentiful in the foods that come to your table. Physicians say that your body is quick to feel a B Vitamins deficiency, but unharmed if you get more than enough. The home of Budweiser is one of the world's biggest sources of B Complex vitamins. They are contained in brewer's yeast, which we supply to leading pharmaceutical manufacturers. From them, our armed forces and our civilian population obtain millions of B Complex vitamin units to supplement the daily diet when necessary. The perfection of this vitamin-rich yeast is one more result of laboratory and research work that has helped to produce the world's most popular beer. Budweiser
